White House Pool.
It's Japan's Turn.
Good Airplane News.
Negro and White Man.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

EVERY FOUR years the government allows fifty thousand dollars for repairing and refurnishing the White House. The money, or part, this year will install a swimming tank for the next President, Roosevelt. That good idea, to be appreciated by future presidents, would surprise some old presidents.

Many, as President Hoover tells you, didn't have even a bathtub in the White House, and when they wanted to wash "all over" took a towel, walked down to the Potomac River, and took their bath there.

AUSTIN CHAMBERLAIN complains, "Japan is making the world uneasy," and appeals to Japanese statesmen to "take account of the growing uneasiness of the world, as their policy develops."

Japan's statesmen might reply:

"It is our turn. You in Europe were making the world uneasy, VERY uneasy, in the big war only a little while ago."

INTERESTING information is supplied concerning the 38 high-speed bombing planes that the Glenn L. Martin Company is making in Baltimore. The total cost will be $2,080,890.

The planes carry each 2,000 pounds of the highest explosives, travel more than 200 miles an hour. What chance would a 30-mile-an-hour battleship have against them? And such a battleship costs twenty times as much as the 38 war planes.

A SOUTHERN gentleman wants wealth "decentralized" and would let the government seize all property above $1,000,000 left by any American.

No doubt that the seizing politician would find a use for the money. But what about discouraging American money-making genius that has built up the United States? Would it be a good thing for the United States to have the ablest men stop working after accumulating their first million?

THE SAME southern gentleman, more interestingly, relates this difference between the worrying white man and the Negro. Says he:

"A white man gets worried about money and worries and worries and blows his head off. A Negro gets worried about money and goes to sleep."

That's probably exact and explains why the white man usually has the money. You can't get anything much without worrying, or keep it either.

THE FORMER Kaiser "celebrated" his 74th birthday in exile at Doorn yesterday. What does a man think about under such conditions, looking back on his long line of chancellors, the ambitions and hopes that have disappeared?

Did the Kaiser think of old Bismarck, lying in his grave on the hill overlooking his beloved Prussian estate at Friedrichsruhe? Lightly, Bismarck was dismissed by the young Kaiser. If he had been retained and had lived until 1914 there would have been no World War about the shooting of an Austrian prince, and destruction of the Hohenzollern dynasty, and 20,000,000 lives would have been prolonged.

THE UNITED STATES Senate orders an inquiry into the slump or "the depression." When two young newspaper men came to New York to seek their fortunes, Charles Edward Russell and Nelson Hersh, their Pullman car went off the track, bumped and bumped, leaned over and stood still. Everybody was outside when Russell awoke in an upper berth and shouted:

"This train is off the track, I tell you. This train is off the track."

It was, but it took him, as it has taken the Senate, some time to find it out.

NOT ALL of labor's troubles are due to "technocracy." In Detroit, a comparatively small number of men stopped work, on strike, in a plant that builds bodies for automobiles. As a result, more than 100,000 other men are out of work, and must stay out until the striking workmen settle their quarrel with the body builders.

Both labor and capital need better methods.

THIS WILL really surprise "best financial minds." Reginald McKenna, chairman of the Midland, biggest bank in Britain, advises England and America both to "inflate their currencies."

McKenna, a great banker, whose views are taken seriously, says:

"It is not the pound sterling, but gold that is unstable."

The pound, he says, has remained stable, whereas the dollar has changed. That is truth, since the dollar is worth sixty cents more than it was in 1929, and is about sixty times harder to get.

CABINET OUT IN GERMAN CRISIS

Hitler May Head New Ministry, French Premier Ousted

By EDWARD L. DEUSS
International News Service.

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—Denied dictorial powers by President von Hindenburg, Lieut. Gen. Kurt von Schleicher resigned as Chancellor of the Reich today.

His resignation once again paved the way for th possible appointment of Adolf Hitler, fiery Nazi leader, as chancellor.

Von Schleicher and his cabinet of aristocrats stepped out of office when von Hindenburg declined to accord the militaristic chancellor power to dissolve for fear of an open break on the floor of Parliament.

With the situation in a state of flux, Von Hindenburg summoned Former Chancellor Franz von Papen and asked him to ascertain whether he could form a cabinet based upon a parliamentary majority.

This request was tantamount to asking Von Papen to form a cabinet, but it was formulated in such a way as to spare him the odium of failure in the event Hitler's National Socialists, the Nationalists and Centrists refuse to tolerate him as chancellor.

It was a foregone conclusion Von Papen would not have clear sailing by any means. The trade unions immediately announced they would oppose him with all their power, calling a general

WOMAN DIES, 12 HURT IN BOMBING

Wife of Sons of Italy Head Killed; Blame Anti-Fascists

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—An explosion attributed by police to an anti-Fascist bombing today killed Mrs. John M. Di Silvestro, wife of the Supreme Master of the Order of the Sons of Italy in the United States, injured at least 12 other persons and demolished the Di Silvestro home.

Di Silvestro, an attorney and former Italian consul here, was not at home at the time of the blast but arrived about five minutes later to find the place in ruins and rescuers searching for his family.

The injured are four of the Di Silvestro children, Arnold, 19; Helen, 14; Anita and Gloria, 11-year-old twins; Miss Marie Guernio, governess and secretary; and at least seven other persons, occupants of nearby residences.

Di Silvestro, a personal friend of Premier Mussolini, returned with his family two days ago from a four-months' trip to Italy.

While there are hundreds of members of the Sons of Italy in Pittsburgh, none of the prominent Italian families or the Italian consulate in South Neville street, had asked police protection today. The consulate here was partly wrecked more than a year ago by a bomb hurled from a passing automobile.

PATTERSON HOLDS 12 FOR COURT

Downfall of $20,000 Resort Stronghold Surprise to Park

Oakland's apparently politically protected Monoco or "Monaca" Club, as it is generally known, and its retinue of waiters, house gamblers and doorkeepers are busy raising bail today following a surprise raid last night by Pennsylvania state police recruited from Reading and Greensburg.

The raid, made on warrants issued by Judge Frank P. Patterson, presiding Allegheny County Judge, came as a surprise to the 175 customers, including many socially prominent persons, as well as a host of city and county officials. The club is in Forbes street, opposite Oakland Police Station.

12 HELD FOR COURT

Fourteen persons were arrested. Two were discharged at the hearing this morning before Judge Patterson, sitting as committing magistrate. Those held for court included Samuel Lewis, Gsu Harris, Frank Pope, Ray Sineway, all charged with violation of the Snyder act; and Charles Gardner, P. J. Caslin, William Da er, Roy Thomas, Pat Haley, Edward O'Day, Walter Ring and George McGilvary, on charges of operating gambling devices. Cuddy DeMarco, the pugilist, and Tom Crowley, the "bouncer," were discharged.

Bond was to be furnished in the amount of $1,000 each by Miles Bryan, McKees Rocks politician.

PARK SURPRISED

Among those most surprised over news of the raid was District Attorney Andrew T. Park. Told a "big club" had been raided, he asked:

"Which one?"

When the identity of the club was revealed, he said:

"They didn't tell me about it. What did they get?"

Then, as an afterthought, he added:

"Judge Patterson didn't say anything to me about it at all. I had my squad out last night laying groundwork for other raids."

Seeking testimony only to make out a prima facie case against the accused, Judge Patterson called his own witnesses. The first called was Robert Herschman, a state policeman, who testified to swearing out the information. He declared he had purchased "intoxicating liquor" in the place. One by one he pointed to the 14 defendants seated in the jury box in No. 1 courtroom and named them as to their activities in the club.

ROLLCALL OF SUSPECTS

As he pointed them out and designated their various duties in the club, they answered to a rollcall of their names. The result follows:

Pope, bartender; Dapper, doorkeeper; Lewis, waiter; Caslin, gambling; Thomas, gambling; Sinaway, waiter; McGilvary,

HOME OF STEEL MAN BOMBED

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 28.—Police today were guarding homes of officials of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company following the explosion of a bomb at 2:25 a. m. today which wrecked the front of the home of A. W. Smith, general superintendent of the company, in an exclusive district here.

Members of the Smith family were uninjured.

Another bomb of three-inch pipe made in the steel company's plant was found unexploded. It is believed the explosion of a smaller bomb blew out the fuse on the larger one.

Police blame radicals for the explosion and are rounding up suspects today.

Smith in Seclusion On Washington Visit

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—(INS.)—An unexpected visitor here today was Alfred E. Smith. Registered at a downtown hotel, he sent out word that he was in conference and could not be disturbed for several hours.

It was believed he came to attend a meeting of the Coolidge committee on transportation. Bernard M. Baruch, another member, was also here, with Walker D. Hines, director general of railroads during the war.

LAUNCH UTILITY RATE DRIVE

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 28.—(INS.)—A united campaign before the Legislature of all municipalities served by the Manufacturers Light and Heat Company to force a reduction in utility rates was in prospect here today.

In letters, dispatched to all municipalities, Mayor Robert E. Griffiths branded utility rates in Pennsylvania as being "too high," and urged a united campaign for more reasonable charges.

Mrs. Roosevelt Visits New Home as Guest

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Mrs. Herbert Hoover received as a visitor today Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, her successor as first lady of the land.

Mrs. Roosevelt arrived by plane this morning and will leave by air with her son, Elliott, this afternoon to join her husband at Warm Springs, Ga.

Mrs. Hoover and Mrs Roosevelt have known each other for many years, their husbands having been respectively Food Administrator and Assistant Secretary of the Navy during the Wilson administration.

Mrs. Hoover showed her visitor over the house and its living quarters in order that she might make plans for arranging this part of the mansion for herself and her family after March 4.

False Alarm Spoils Firemen's Feast

NEW BRIGHTON, Pa., Jan. 28.—While New Brighton firemen were enjoying a pig roast as guests of the Beaver Falls firemen some one sent in a false alarm of fire. The dinner was cold but the firemen were hot when they returned.

3 BANDITS FLEE IN GUN DUEL

Firing numerous shots, Swissvale police chased three bandits who had held up a drug store through the streets of Swissvale and the yards of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for more than three hours last night and early this morning.

The bandits, all with guns, entered the drug store of William and Joe Meszaros, at 1900 Monongahela avenue, Swissvale, late last night and held up the proprietors.

After taking $75, a watch, an overcoat and several boxes of cigars, they dashed from the store into an automobile bearing Indiana license plates. The two Meszaros followed in their car, picking up Patrolman Henry Axon, who fired as the cars sped down the street.

In a blind alley off Church street, the bandits left their car and fled over an embankment into the Baltimore and Ohio yard.

More police were called and a search through the yards, with shots fired when one of the men was seen between box cars, continued for hours.

The bandits' automobile, with the stolen overcoat and cigars still in it, was confiscated by Swissvale police.

HARLEM RESORT BATTLE FATAL

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—A man was killed and three others wounded during a wild melee, in which bullets roared and knives flashed, in a Harlem speakeasy before dawn today. Screaming women and shouting men fled from the place, leaving it littered with abandoned wraps and pocketbooks.

A regular weekly "racket" or dance was in full sway in the place when a gunman sauntered to a table where Peter Moran, owner of the resort, was sitting with two men and two women. Without warning he pulled out a gun and began firing.

Moran, wounded in the thigh, tumbled under a table. The next bullet his David Feldman, 24, who staggered into a corner and died. Henry Clark, 28, another man at the proprietor's table, fell with a bullet in the head, and then the gunman flung away his empty gun and started for a rear exit.

As panic swept the place, several men closed in on the gunman. Near the entrance they got him down and jammed penknives into his body again and again. Taken to a hospital, he was identified as Joseph Fisher, 27.

Mrs. McCormick's Estate Unable to Pay Krenn

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—(INS.)—Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick's estate, once regarded as one of the vast fortunes in America, has been unable to pay the $2,000 a month income arranged for Edwin Krenn, intimate friend of the late society leader, it was disclosed today.

Due to the involved condition of Mrs. McCormick's estate, Krenn has been induced to waive the lifetime annuity of $24,000 and reinstall himself as heir to the five-twelfths share which he gave up shortly after Mrs. McCormick's death.

Under the original agreement the Swiss architect agreed to accept the annuity in return for relinquishing his right to a share in the estate.

The estate is so involved, however, that the executors were unable to meet the monthly payments of $2,000, and likewise Krenn's share of the estate is regarded as practically without value now. Real estate holdings make up a large share of the once vast fortune.

Krenn's only hope of realizing a portion of the value of his inheritance depends on a rising market.

Pending claims on the estate have more than covered the $1,032,000 in personal property left by John D. Rockefeller's daughter.

TALBOT FEARS RULE BY REDS, SOCIAL WORKERS, JOBLESS

TOWNSHIP MEN GET WARNING AT BANQUET

State League Cool to Boyd's Attack on Direct Primary

Social workers, Communists and the army of those receiving relief may combine into a new political majority that may overthrow our present system of government, Speaker Grover C. Talbot warned members of the Pennsylvania State Association of Township Commissioners at their convention banquet last night in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

His declaration was made during his address on relief for the unemployed in which he insisted the relief problem should be handled with local funds and said it would be impossible for the state to raise the $96,000,000 required to care for the jobless during the next two years.

FEARS ALLIANCE

Explaining his fear of a coalition of social workers, Communists and unemployed, he said:

"I know there are thousands of people who would work if they could be provided with work, but the flesh is weak and in this period of our history it is the line of least resistance.

"We have developed a group of social workers who are trying to justify their existence, and worst of all during this period of unrest the Communists are close to the border of selling their ideas to the above mentioned, and I say to you frankly that with this group united in their efforts they may in time become the majority in so far as the voting is concerned and overthrow our present system of government."

BOYD RAPS PRIMARY

Speaker James S. Boyd, of the State Senate, had other fears. He appealed, but got no evident support in the form of interrupting applause, for the overthrow of the direct primary system.

He declared that although the direct primary was established as a reform measure, it had failed and asked that the Commissioners support the drive for the return of the convention system. His topic was on false economy in governmental activities and he cited the cost of primaries as a useless expenditure.

He counseled the Commissioners to resist economy measures proposed by an aroused citizenry if the proposals, in their judgment, came within the class of false economies.

PLEDGES ROOSEVELT AID

State Treasurer Edward Martin, Republican state chairman, pledged the aid of the state Republican organization to President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt in the solution of the nation's problems. In his speech on needed economy he declared the time had come to cut out frills and overlapping governmental activities. He deplored what he termed the "political layout" of our state road system.

Other speakers included Harold C. Pike, chairman of the legislative committee of the Township Commissioners; Council President Frank S. Herron and County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern. William E. Armstrong, convention chairman, presided.

LINDSAY TO FLY TO ROOSEVELT

Joseph Paul-Boncour's French cabinet.

News of the Prime Minister's defeat on fiscal policies was scanned closely in official Washington, where preparations are going forward for debt negotiations with those foreign nations that paid up in December.

France was not one of these. The previous French cabinet headed by Premier Herriot fell on the debts question, and the $20,000,000 interest payment due last December went unpaid.

ROOSEVELT STAND

But the French default has not been considered as such by President-elect Roosevelt, who has signified his willingness to hear the pleas of all countries—there were six of them—that met the December installments.

He takes the French non-payment more in the nature of a deferment, and the belief has been widely held that if France makes a settlement, it, too, will be in a privileged class for new discussions.

Therefore today's developments in Paris were noted with the highest interest in Washington and speculation was immediately started as to who would succeed Paul-Boncour. The choice was held here to be one which would give some indication of the immediate future course of France in moving for debts revision.

PARIS WAITING

Word from abroad has been that probably no action would be taken by the Paris government until it sees what comes of the discussions between Great Britain and the United States in March.

Meanwhile, lying on the table in the Senate today was a resolution by Senator Robinson, (Rep.) of Indiana, which called on Congress to reaffirm its policy against debts reduction adopted more than a year ago.

strike if he was intrusted with the chancellorship.

In tendering his resignation, Von Schleicher pointed out to Von Hindenburg the President had only three avenues of approach to solve the present situation.

One, he said, was the appointment of Hitler as chancellor of a parliamentary cabinet. Another was the naming of Hitler at the head of a minority cabinet composed of Nazis and Nationalists.

The third was recourse to a non-partisan dictatorial cabinet. President Von Hindenburg declined to consider the latter for the present, but it was understood Von Papen might recommend Hitler's immediate appointment rather than undertake the seemingly hopeless task of obtaining a parliamentary majority for himself.

FRENCH CABINET FALLS

PARIS, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—The government headed by the veteran bushy-haired fighter, Joseph Paul-Boncour, resigned today a few hours after being overthrown on a taxation issue by a boisterous, shouting Chamber of Deputies.

President Albert Lebrun called for immediate consultations with party leaders in an effort to select a new premier.

The Paul-Boncour cabinet, which had existed only 40 days, was defeated by a vote of 390 to 193 after wrangling over budget measures in the Chamber had lasted several hours after midnight.

The 59-year-old premier, who had been war minister under his predecessor, Edouard Herriot, lost his post because the party with which he formerly was affiliated, the Socialists, deserted him.

They broke up the Radical Socialist and Socialist combination, which had sustained his cabinet as well as that of Herriot for six months, by refusing to accept a 5 per cent increase on income and other general taxes.

Edouard Daladier and Camille Chautemps, ministers under both Herriot and Paul-Boncour, and Jules Jeaneneny, president of the senate, were considered likely to be called upon by President Lebrun to form a new government.

There seemed little chance that Herriot, who made a last minute plea for the taxation measure, would receive an invitation again. He has declared in unequivocal terms that he will not resume the office until France has agreed to make the month overdue debt interest payment to the United States.

SUITS AGAINST VANG BALKED

Judge Elder W. Marshall, of Common Pleas Court, has permanently enjoined John Douglas, Jr., and Alderman Thomas A. Flanigan from prosecuting George Vang or accepting any further cases, as a result of the dispute of Vang and Douglas over city wharves.

Vang is president of the Iron City Sand and Gravel Company, and in a dispute over wharf rights three suits were filed against him by Douglas and several hundred more were threatened. Douglas alleged violation of a city ordinance.

The court took the position that only the city had the right to bring such prosecutions.

AIDE OF VERONA CONVICTED

Tony Siano, Verona lieutenant in the Hill district, today prepared to file a motion for a new trial, following his conviction before Judge George V. Moore, in Criminal Court, of accepting money from a resort proprietress, allegedly for protection.

Mary Hawkins, of 145 Elm street, who testified she had paid the money, ranging from $50 to $75 a week, was placed on probation for 18 months. The judge stipulated that if she reopens her place she will go to the workhouse.

Bertha Prisby, Negro, of the Hill district, was arrested during the proceedings. She denied on the witness stand that she had given money to Siano, and he was found not guilty on that count of the indictment. Siano and the women were indicted in a special grand jury probe.

77 DAIL SEATS FOR DE VALERA

DUBLIN, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—With nine districts unreported, President De Valera's Fianna Fail had 72 seats in the Irish Free State Dail this afternoon. Former President Cosgrave's opposition had 44, the Labor party 8, the Independents 9 and the Centrists 11.

President De Valera's headquarters estimated the party's final total would be 77 seats in the Dail, a clear majority of two over all other parties.

Through the party newspaper the president, asserting the result was certain, appealed for cooperation "in the task of restoring our country to its former greatness and making it a happy home for all our people."

HOUSE FACING NEW FIGHT ON DRY FUNDS

Cost Slash and Ban On Wire-Tapping May Hit Reefs

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—House members today faced new votes on slashing the cost of prohibition enforcement 20 per cent and binding what money was left with such rigid restrictions that officials who are familiar with the problems of administering the law termed them "a severe handicap."

The House voted yesterday to make the reduction and do other things it had refused consistently to do in the past—such as provide that none of the $8,440,000 should be spent for wire tapping, to buy liquor for evidence or to pay informers.

But these amendments were adopted part way through consideration of the bill appropriating money for the Justice Department, and therefore there was a chance for any member to demand a separate vote on any of the amendments approved.

If that were done the final outcome was unpredictable. For instance, the amendment by Representative Griffin (Dem.), of New York, limiting the bureau's allocation for 1934 enforcement to $8,440,000 against the $10,250,000 allowed this year, was adopted by an 11-vote margin—129 to 118. A few changed minds would switch the result.

Wire-tapping, banned by the House, already has been limited to big commercial operators. Only 101 of the 90,000 cases made by the prohibition bureau were through evidence gathered on tapped wires.

This information was given to the House last session. Then, it beat an identical amendment by Tinkham (Rep.), of Massachusetts, 132 to 103. Yesterday, it reversed itself and inserted the amendment 122 to 107.

These votes reflected considerable change in the general attitude of House members since before the last election.

NEW CHINESE ATTACK FAILS

By DIXON HOSTE.
International News Service.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 28.—Chinese forces launched another attack on Chiumen Pass, near Shanhaikwan, today but were repulsed by Japanese troops after a brief encounter.

Reports said the attack was made under cover of a barrage of artillery fire, which failed to dislodge the Japanese.

TOKIO, Jan. 28.—(INS.)—Japan's attitude toward the League of Nations stiffened today following reports that preliminary statements by the League's subcommittee of nine placed blame on Japan for the Manchurian conflict.

It was learned unofficially the Japanese foreign office will overlook no "unreasonable" statements in the subcommittee's report, adopted at Geneva yesterday.

Japan, it was emphasized, will refuse to accept parts of the League report dealing with a historical survey of the Manchurian conflict if statements from the report of the Lytton Commission on Manchuria are found to have been adopted. Under the same condition, any conclusions reached will likewise be spurned.

JUDGE CHARGES BANKER'S JURY

Judge A. B. Reid today charged the jury in the embezzlement case against Ansley D. Smith, former cashier of the closed Citizens Trust Company of Bellevue, and the jury began its deliberations.

Smith has been on trial two weeks, charged with making a false statement of the bank's condition to the state, and with embezzlement of about $35,000 which he is alleged to have lost in the stock market.

Character witnesses testified for Smith yesterday and arguments by attorneys followed. Assistant District Attorney Harry R. Phillips spoke for the state and Attorney Albert C. Hirsch for the defendant.

STRIKE TIEING FORD PLANTS CONTINUES

Only 40 Body Makers Return; Auto King Raps Rivals

BULLETIN.

DETROIT, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Officials of the Ford Motor Comuany today said they expected the strike at the Briggs Manufacturing Company plants to end Monday and declared that "within six hours" after the 6,000 Briggs employes return to work, Ford plants throughout the country, forced into suspension, will resume operation.

DETROIT, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—The strike in the plants of the Briggs Manufacturing Company, which forced a suspension of operations by the Ford Motor Company throughout the United States, still was in effect today, although 40 men returned to their benches at the Highland Park body plant.

Approximately 100,000 workers in the Ford assembly plants throughout the country are affected by the suspension, the Ford Company announced, when the supply of bodies was cut off by the Briggs plant shut-down.

While no statement was forthcoming from the Ford offices today, it was indicated unofficially the motor car assembly plant would be reopened as soon as the flow of bodies was resumed.

STRIKERS MEETING

The possibility this might be Monday morning appeared to be remote unless a prompt general return by the body workers at the Briggs plant materialized. Leaders of the Briggs strikers called a meeting for today to consider the offer of the company of a guaranteed base wage.

Men who returned to work at the Highland Park Briggs plant entered without molestation, although some jeers and cat calls greeted them as they passed into the plant.

Outside the Highland Park and the Mack avenue plant on the East Side several hundred men were gathered, but state and city police were there in large numbers and reported no disorder.

RAPS COMPETITORS

Henry Ford was quoted by the London Evening Standard yesterday as saying in a trans-Atlantic telephone interview that "certain of my competitors" were seeking to prevent "another Ford car from leaving the factory."

All efforts to elicit direct comment from Ford on the statement were futile, but Ford company officials who would not permit their names to be used said it was "substantially correct." They declined either to explain or elaborate the statement.

(The Evening Standard statement also quoted Ford as saying, "The actual truth is that certain bankers are trying to obtain control of the Ford concern," but associates said Ford told them informally that was "not exactly correct.") gambling; Gardner, gambling; O'Day, gambling; Haley, gambling, and Harris, waiter and bartender. DeMarco and Crowley, Trooper Herschman testified, did nothing but "hang around" the place. DeMarco, friends declared, sold neckties.

When the raiders arrived, a few minutes after midnight, the club was in full swing.

TROOPERS ARRIVE

Downstairs the tinkle of ice in glasses blended with the soft notes of a string orchestra and the shuffling of feet on the dance floor as the police pushed in to interrupt but not entirely spoil the fun of a crowd estimated by State Police Lieut. E. C. Griffith, of Reading, at 175.

Upstairs a little white ball bounced merrily in the roulette wheel and fashionably-attired couples tried to beat the dealer at black-jack, all unaware of the quiet intrusion shattering the festivities below.

The raid was the climax of a three-month investigation during which state police in plain clothes say they frequented the place, gambling and buying liquor side by side with Pittsburgh swells and "right guys." Five of the investigators were in the club and took part in a noiseless scuffle preceding opening of the iron doors to the 15 raiders.

The club management spells the name "Monoco."

ENDS 'ROMAN HOLIDAY'

The raid saw the end of the club's Roman holiday, which started when its rooms, conservatively estimated, with equipment to be worth $20,000, were opened to a restricted public something more than six months ago. It is in Forbes street, opposite the Oakland Police Station.

The main downstairs room runs the full width of the building. At one end is the bar, some 30 feet long, attended by a trio of bartenders. Shining glasses and bottles bearing labels with an air of authority were piled in pyramids before a tall mirror reminiscent of pre-prohibition days.

Separated from the bar by a tall lattice partition was the main dining room. An orchestra stand with a cleared space for dancing in one corner of the room were hemmed in by 50-odd tables covered with spotless white linen. Chairs had red and green covers. Woodwork was in orange and black.

Up three flights of plush-carpeted stairs was the gambling room where the lambs went to be shorn in reputedly large numbers. Roulette, dice, black-jack and bird cage dice were among the diversions for the "too-rich" and the suckers. On the same floor were several private dining rooms and the kitchen.

OWN BEER PLANT

A large and modern refrigerating plant in the basement was used as an accessory in the brewing of the club's own draught beer which tasted, last night, of sarsaparilla.

Vats and air compressors and barrels lined the walls of the cellar, together with a goodly supply of bottled liquors.

Entrance was gained through a parking lot fronting on Oakland avenue, a couple of hundred feet from the police station. A steel door led into a tiny vestibule, in which visitors stood under a light while careful eyes made a thorough inspection through a slot in another heavy iron door.

Visitors who looked "right" were admitted into a spacious vestibule barred from the clubrooms by the second door.

There the careful inspection continued while guests placed their names and the month and day of their birth on a card. The signature and date were then compared with the signature and date on a similar card in the files of the club which members had been asked to fill out when first admitted to the club.

The entrance of the squad was marked with little noise in the club. Drinkers and diners near the entrance heard the sound of muffled blows on the steel door, a slight tinkle of glass and a subdued scuffle.

The five men on the inside had pulled guns, attendants said, and forced the door tenders to admit the raiders. Drawn revolvers subdued objection and the entrance was effected.

The music and dancing continued even after the helmeted police were seen in the bar. Waitters busied themselves collecting checks while the police were seizing the liquor and breaking up the gambling.

Customer Notes Debs' Joy as Troopers 'Pep Up' Parties

By ONE OF THE CUSTOMERS

A faint crash sounded above the waltz music flooding the dimly-lit Monoco Club dance salon. Six or eight stylishly clad couples moved on the polished floor before the deep semi-circle of tables.

Again a tinkle of breaking glass. My friend said:

"It sounds like a raid."

I laughed. The orchestra continued to play "Let's Make Believe." The girl, in pale blue, at the next table daintily lifted a spoonful of fruit salad from her glass goblet.

Then it came. A loud banging noise—the thud of running feet along the corridor—and three gray-uniformed figures of state police catapulted on to the dance floor. Two dashed through and up the stairs to the casino.

One tall policeman, wearing the peaked helmet of the state patrol, stood his ground imposingly near the center of the floor. More pounding feet went by behind the black screen hiding the bar.

If the orchestra stopped, the lull was too temporary to be noticed. In a moment the tune was filling the hall again, shoes were shuffling. Several couples rose to join those on the floor.

Only one of the gentlemen, with a lady, called one of the three plainclothesmen, who now entered, to his table—possibly to try to make a "fix."

Possibly 80 or 90 couples were in the hall at the time—12:15. The names of half the guests could be found on the pages of Pittsburgh's social register — debutantes, who, with their escorts, had graced the best ballrooms of this city and the East. Others were immaculately dressed business men—all but a few accompanied by ladies.

Unexcited, the guests sipped their drinks, watched the progress of the raid as if it were a show.

The Reading police were being treated to a sophisticated audience.

I overheard a waiter running by saying:

"What's the idea of them cops pulling guns. These are all respectable people."

BILL-COLLECTING RUSH

The waiters were in a considerable hurry. They were trying to collect the bills. I don't know how many they got; but I was one of them.

Meanwhile the orchestra played as suavely as before, punctuated now and then by the crash of a breaking bottle. More dancers were on the floor than ever—the party seemed pretty well "pepped up."

I heard several young ladies, whom I had previously met against a background of the most notable and staid Pittsburgh homes, remark:

"It's my first raid. How exciting."

Then a bandsman, climbing high on the stand, waved with his guitar for silence:

"The mana—e-er—those in charge, request that all guests leave at once—couples first."

This request was relayed to those caught in the gambling casino above.

Regretfully finishing off our drinks, we lined up. People were chatting about whether their friends had received "bids" to the "big" party (an important society event to be held tonight), and what would be a good false name to use.

Monoco Club's Seized Liquors Destroyed

Bottles of champagne, cognac, crusty-looking port wine and sparkling bordeaux — Scotch whisky with the colorful plaid covers on the bottles—these and many more delicacies of the vine went the way of all forbidden things today when state police destroyed them after the Monoco Club raid.

Saved, however, are three cabinets full of membership cards, a "new 400" in the city's social circles.

The police, who seized all the rich and valuable wines and liquors in their early-morning raid, got, in all:

Beer, 225 pints, 11 gallons; martini flavoring, two quarts; gin, 21 quarts; bordeaux, 4 quarts; port wine 26 quarts; sherry, 8 quarts; Scotch whisky, 11 quarts; cinzano, 3½ quarts; champagne, 3 quarts; rum, 2 quarts; cognaco champagne, 1 quart; gin, in pints, 9; Sanson champagne, 1 quart; Jamaica rum, 2 quarts; sloe gin, 1 quart; lemon juice, 1 quart; Benedictine, 1 quart; Baccardi rum in reed covered jugs, 4 quarts; Carlshanns punch, 1 quart; Pennodsk, 1 quart; Cointreau, 2 quarts; Cacao Chouao, 1 quart; cream 'e menthe, 1 quart; Empire State whisky, 12 quarts; Canadian beer, 480 pints; ale, 240 pints.

HOLLYWOOD HIT BY ALIEN DRIVE

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—A wholesale exodus of foreign film talent from Hollywood was forecast today by Murray W. Garsson, special assistant to Secretary of Labor Doak. Garsson announced all foreign actresses, actors and technicians were under scrutiny.

Garsson inaugurated the long-heralded government drive against aliens illegally residents of Hollywood by arresting John Farrow.

Farrow, allegedly a native of Australia, was arrested while attending a fashionable hotel dance with Mona Maris, South American actress. He was released on $2,500 bond and will be given a hearing Tuesday or Wednesday of next week on charges he overstayed his leave in this country.

Farrow frequently had been reported engaged to various Hollywood beauties, including Dolores Del Rio and Lila Lee, before their marriages, and Maureen O'Sullivan.

The arrest was made on complaint of the Henry woman. When taken into custody Leicher was unarmed, police said.

Dr. Kidd, Rail Expert At Pitt, Killed by Train

National Authority's Body Found Near Pitcairn Yards

Prof. Howard C. Kidd, internationally known railroad authority and head of the department of commerce of the University of Pittsburgh School of Business Administration, was dead today, a victim of a Pennsylvania Railroad train.

Dr. Kidd

Dr. Kidd died a few minutes after being found on the tracks beneath the Moss Side Bridge, near Pitcairn, late yesterday.

He was to have delivered a lecture to the local alumni of the School of Business Administration at Hotel Schenley last night. News of his death came as a shock to members of the faculty and alumni who gathered for the address.

Dr. Kidd returned a few weeks ago from a trip to South America, where he studied rail conditions. The trip was made at the request of British bankers, who sought his opinion in the Argentine, where the group held $1,200,000,000 worth of rail properties.

Yesterday afternoon Dr. Kidd kept an appointment with J. W. Fike, assistant trainmaster at the Pitcairn yards. After a half-hour visit he left. Two hours later an engineer of an east-bound freight saw a man's body lying between the tracks near the Moss Side Bridge. He informed the yard office, and several men went to the spot and found Dr. Kidd. He died a few minutes later, and the body was taken to the Thomas A. Russell funeral home in Broadway, Pitcairn.

Dr. Kidd, unmarried, lived at the University Club. He was born in New York City on January 30, 1892, the son of the late Rev. Robert W. Kidd and Mrs. Manda H. Harper Kidd. His father was pastor of the Second United Presbyterian Church of New York City and later of the Beaver Falls (Pa.) United Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Kidd received his A. B. degree from Geneva College in 1908, his A. M. from Columbia University in 1911 and his Ph. D. from the University of London in 1928. He became assistant professor of economics at the University of Pittsburgh in 1915, leaving four years later to become associate professor of industrial economics at Carnegie Institute of Technology. Two years later he returned to the University of Pittsburgh as professor of commerce, school of business administration.

Dr. Kidd was appointed two years ago by the Public Service Commission to study a proposed rail merger which would have joined the Reading and Central Railway of New Jersey with the Baltimore and Ohio. Books written by Dr. Kidd are "On Foreign Trade" and "A New Era for British Railways."

Wash Boiler Still Seized By Raiders

Federal prohibition agents reported seizing a 20-gallon still, made from a wash boiler, in a house at 1828 Wharton street, South Side, and three gallons of moonshine whisky, which was hidden in a trap in the floor of the bathroom.

Jigg's Creator Fed Up On Corned Beef

CHICAGO, Jan. 28—(Universal)—Cartoonist George McManus yesterday was clear on two points: He does not like corn beef and cabbage any more and Jiggs will never win a marital skirmish with Maggie.

He stressed these points as he stepped off the Santa Fe Chief and discussed with reporters his famed comic strip, "Bringing Up Father," which in 21 years has brought billions of chuckles from an international audience.

Jiggs may prefer his corned beef and cabbage to caviar or pheasant, but McManus has had his fill. He explained his distaste by telling of a lecture trip among girls' schools, where each domestic science class was eager to show its skill.

He reminisced:

"I had it three times a day for weeks, and, although the dish has now made the social register, I no longer enjoy it."

Hearts of many women readers have been moved by Jiggs' defeat in every encounter with his wife. They have frequently written to McManus, urging he give his hero "a break."

McManus left for New York on the Century.

FEDERAL COSTS KNIFED AGAIN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Places to chop off government expenses as much as possible were sought in the Senate today.

Bound to a modified economy program, Senate Democrats picked the $941,000,000 treasury-post-office appropriation bill to pieces, to see where some more odd millions could be lopped off, but their leaders agreed a balanced-budget goal would not be reached this session.

In the House the money bill supplying operating funds in the 1934 fiscal year for the State, Labor, Commerce and Justice departments was the ammunition for rounds of heated debate.

Meanwhile, a House Ways and Means sub-committee heard additional testimony on the need for legislation to raise American tariffs against countries with depreciated currencies. Congressional Republicans have launched a drive for higher tariffs or stabilized world money markets, but Democrats are unwilling to take up tariff measures now.

James A. Farrell, former head of United States Steel, said such legislation was the "most important thing before Congress."

MOTHER SAVES GIRL IN FIRE

A 3-year-old girl was carried to safety by her mother and two other children and two men were forced to flee in night attire when fire damaged a two-story frame building at 725 Indiana avenue, Glassport, early today.

Mr. and Mrs. Mike Kwiatkoski, both 42, and their children, Ted, 14, and Jennie, 13, were awakened when their 3-year-old daughter, Theresa, began crying because of smoke. Mrs. Kwiatksoki snatched Theresa from her crib and carried her to safety through the smoke-filled rooms.

The others, including a boarder, Steve Shimai, 35, also left in safety.

The cause was attributed to a short-circuit in the wiring and damage estimated at $15,000 by Nick George, captain of Fire Company No. 1.

The only casualty was Jimmie, a canary bird.

Man Questioned On Slaying Freed

Walter Nicholson, 35, of John street, Braddock, arrested for questioning in connection with the murder of Samuel Wilson, 35, of Braddock, whose body was found in Hangmans Hollow, Penn Township, Tuesday, was released by county detectives yesterday. Nicholson denied knowing the identity of the killers. He admitted knowing Wilson, saying he met him in a speakeasy, the detectives said.

SUGGESTED SHE MARRY HIM, SAYS CHALFA

Scientists Summoned In Defense of Two Munhall Women

Defense attorneys in the murder trial of Mrs. Anna Allas and Mrs. Mary Chalfa, Munhall mothers accused in the death of Stephen and Andrew Allas, today were prepared to march an array of scientists before a Criminal Court jury to testify the women could not have poisoned Stephen, 12-year-old step-son of Mrs. Allas, with tin salts, as the state charges.

John Chalfa, husband of one of the defendants, today testified that Mrs. Gizella Young, the alleged fortune teller in the case, had suggested that she might be his wife in the event of the death of Mrs. Chalfa. He testified:

"She told me that if my wife would die, perhaps she would become my wife."

On cross-examination by Assistant District Attorney Haggerty, Chalfa said that three days after Mrs. Young had told his fortune, Joseph Volki, insurance man, appeared and wanted to sell him a big insurance policy.

Joseph Propokovich, funeral director of the Munhall district, was one of the principal defense witnesses at last night's session of court—the second evening session during the trial. He testified he had buried Stephen and Andrew Allas, Richard Duyva, a baby kept by Mrs. Chalfa, and Joseph Mantyo, Mrs. Allas' first husband, who died in 1928.

TELLS OF EMBALMING

After testifying he had embalmed both Stephen and Andrew without first having a doctor pronounce them dead, Propokovich was questioned directly by Visiting Judge J. Frank Graff, of Armstrong County:

"Is it your practice to embalm bodies before the doctor pronounces them dead?"

"Yes."

"In all cases?"

"Not in all, but in these."

Andrew Young, divorced husband of the state's star witness, testified against his former wife, saying she started in the fortune-telling business in 1931 after coming to America from Czechoslovakia.

DESCRIBES 'SPELL'

The mystic actions alleged to have surrounded his wife's relations with the defendants were described by Young, who said:

"Gizella told Mrs. Chalfa that she would fix her husband in three months so that he would die. She told me she had written to her mother in the old country for nails and toenails and hair and clothing from a dead person. She said she would give this stuff to Mrs. Chalfa to do the killing."

Upholding the defense contention that Stephen Allas died as a result of injuries received in a neighborhood football game two weeks before before his death, his stepbrother, Henry Mantye, 10, and Joseph Olack, a friend of Stephen, described the game in which he was said to have collided head-on with "Mike" Kuzman, being knocked unconscious.

Mrs. Mary Bertza, a neighbor of the Allas family, testified she saw Stephen drink juice of stale tomatoes from an old tin can only a few days before he died.

AUTO COLLISION INJURES 4

Two children and two women were treated at Allegheny General Hospital today for minor injuries suffered when an automobile in which they were passengers struck the rear end of a truck parked without lights at 836 Spring Garden avenue.

Those injured were Mrs. Catherine Sunderhauf, 33, of 1021 High street; Mrs. Catherine Fuerst, 31, and her two children, Margaret, 4, and Richard, 2, all of 1 Hunnell street.

They were passengers in an automobile of Conrad Hoffmeister, 27, of 1 Hunnell street.

Dennis Mallory, 28, of 838 Concord street, driver of the truck, was arrested on a charge of violating the automobile laws.

Ask Police to Hunt For Missing Youth

Police today were asked to search for Orval Bosse, 16, of 3537 Sirius street, who disappeared last night. He left home at 6:45 p. m. to meet a friend at Mt. Zion Lutheran Church, in Perrysville avenue and failed to return home.

News of Reprieve Fails To Cheer Ruth Judd

STATE PRISON, FLORENCE, Ariz., Jan. 28.—(AP.)—A prison guard declared today that Winnie Ruth Judd did not seem pleased when she learned the Arizona Board of Pardons and Paroles had granted her 56 more days of life. George Shute, prison guard captain, said:

"She took it just about like she takes everything here. She didn't act pleased. She seemed to think it might go against her."

Information was telephoned here from Phoenix the board had set April 14 as the date on which she is to be hanged for murder of Agnes Anne Leroi, one of the two "trunk murder" case victims, unless it decides to grant her a pardon or commutation to a lesser sentence.

She received the news just three weeks before she othehwise would have set foot upon the 13 iron steps leading to the prison's little gallows room. February 17 was previous date, set by the Arizona Supreme Court when it denied her a new trial.

The slender, blone woman, now just turning 28, next month will round out a year in prison. Originally, she was sentenced to be hanged last May.

U. P.'S PREPARING TO CELEBRATE 75TH ANNIVERSARY

OBSERVANCES TO START ON JUNE 28

Local congregations of the United Presbyterian Church are completing plans for the seventy-fifth anniversary of their organization, to be observed from June 28 to July 2.

May 26, 1858, marked the beginning of the denomination under the name United Presbyterian, as formulated by the Union of the Associate and Associate Reformed Presbyterian Churches. Five years ago the General Assembly appointed a special committee of 15 to plan for this observance.

Preliminary to the anniversary celebration, a history is being prepared by each presbytery and synod. Three national bodies of the denomination will meet in joint session in Syria Mosque from June 28 through July 2, to review the past and look toward the future. The anniversary text is "That In All Things He Might Have the Pre-eminence."

The general program will deal with denominational interests, reviewing the missionary, educational and evangelistic work of the church in America and foreign fields, and outlining a program of work. Simultaneous meetings will be held in individual churches on June 18.

The history of the United Presbyterian denomination antedates May 26, 1858, which is being celebrated this year. The Associate Church was organized in Scotland in 1733. The Associate Reformed Church was formed in 1782 by a union of Associate and Reformed Presbyterian churches. The Reformed Presbyterian denomination was represented in America as early as 1720.

The afternoon program begins at 2:30 with a discussion of "The Music of Our Hymns." A study of sources and analyses of the character of hymns in the Common Service Book will be made. Typical hymns will be sung in illustration together with Latin Plain Song, German Chorales, Calvinistic Psalm Tunes, English Tunes and American Tunes.

The evening program, beginning at 7:30, will include "Our Church Services and Their Music," a discussion of the present interest in worship, with an explanation of the Lutheran Liturgy and its musical settings. A practical drill in the rendition of each part of the service will be followed by informal discussion. The Pittsburgh Lutheran Choir will lead the singing.

SERMON SERIES TO BE OPENED IN EAST END

In an attempt to give practical religion a new vitality and give people something tangible to grasp in their religious life, the Rev. Dr. John Ray Ewers, of the East End Christian Church, South Highland avenue, tomorrow begins a series of seven sermons which will continue until the middle of March.

In connection with the sermons, he offers for voluntary signatures, a seven-point pledge, intended as an individual program of "spiritual exercises." The sermon series follows: Tomorrow, "Our Bible"; February 5, "Prayers"; February 12, "Making Converts"; February 19, "Generosity"; February 26, "Public Worship"; March 5, "Cheerfulness"; March 12, "Social Justice."

A fair and honest estimate of the Kurds, an Aryan group in Western Persia, will be made at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow in St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Pennsylvania avenue and Manhattan street, by the Rev. Alfred K. Boerger, executive secretary of the Lutheran Orient Mission.

The Kurds, the Rev. Boerger will point out, are typical mountaineers, loyal to a friend and suspicious of a stranger until he has proven his identity and purpose. During the two years he lived among them, the Rev. Boerger was often 125 miles from any American or European assistance. Soujbulak, a city of 12,000 population, located in Northwestern Persia in the Azerbaijan Province, is the central station from which Lutheran missionary work is administered among the Mohammedan people, the Rev Boerger says.

BRITON BOOSTS HOME BUYING CAMPAIGN

By GEORGE ERNEST OSMUND
Founder of the All-British Campaign. (In an interview with Mary Hacker for Universal Service.)

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The all-British campaign was founded by me in September, 1925; its aim was to promote the sale of British goods to British people.

We set about this in two ways. We persuaded the shopper to announce that he—or more important still, she—would buy only British goods; and then we persuaded the shopkeeper to announce that he stocked only British goods.

The shopper was the first person to be attacked. We had printed a little card, which we called the "link," which was distributed over the whole country, and then over the whole empire. It announced that the shopper intended to buy British goods, and was proud of it. This card he simply laid on the counter when he entered a shop.

'BUY BRITISH' CARDS

When I asked my printers to print these cards, they refused to undertake the work, which they denounced as a crazy scheme. I went away and came back an hour later with an order for a hundred and fifty. The printers began work at once, and have never stopped.

So much for the shopper. The shop-keeper next occupied our councils.

For him I had made statuettes and statues of our "emblem," a figure of Britannia, in bronze and in white stone; plaques for the walls of his shop, and posters and hand-bills of varying size were distributed. There are thousands of the statuettes in England and the colonies. All the commissioners of dominions have them in their offices, from West Africa to Quebec.

The Prince of Wales has several. I have seen photographs of his car with an "emblem" in bronze on the radiator. Mr. Stanley Baldwin has one, Admiral Lord Jellico, Sir Austen Chamberlain, Sir Edward Elgar—"master of the king's musick"—and a number of other influential people.

CAMPAIGN RESULTS

It is hard to assess results,—although I regard the springing up of such institutions as the Empire Marketing Board as a direct result.

I can only judge of the share that my campaign has had in promoting Empire shopping by the number of letters I receive saying:

"After five years I am still shopping with your card."

"The emblem is in the office where it was five years ago."

"We have kept your posters in the window for three years."

And, better still, letters from shop-keepers who ask, a little reluctantly, for posters and statuettes, because they are unable to keep their customers without them.

I should be interested to hear of America undertaking such a campaign.

America should be a splendid ground for such an organization.

'Buy American' Indorsed By Hardware Men Here

The "Buy American" campaign was indorsed at a banquet of the Pittsburgh Retail Hardware Association last night in Fort Pitt Hotel. The dinner was attended by more than 500 hardware men from the Pittsburgh district.

Frank A. Hegner, president of the organization, indorsing the "Buy American" plan, said:

"'Buy American' means employment of idle American people and use of American dollars. The hardware industry, a characteristic American industry, has developed with the growth of the nation, and urges the use of American goods by American people. The Pittsburgh Retail Hardware Association heartily indorses 'Buy American.'"

U. S. Purchase Drive Gains, London Hears

LONDON, Jan. 28.—(Universal.)—A dispatch from the Washington correspondent of the London News-Chronicle today states:

"The movement, under the leadership of W. R. Hearst, to refuse to buy foreign goods is making great headway and has already affected import traders. New York stores are being forced to cancel many foreign orders."

Victim of Amnesia Safe With Brother

After being cared for by Mt. Lebanon police yesterday, D. Lionel Gregory, former Chicago manufacturer who was found wandering the streets several days after he alighted from a Chicago bus at Sewickley, is today at the home of his brother, the Rev. J. J. Gregory, at Purdy, Va., his original destination. Gregory left his home in Wilmette, Ill., several days ago and could remember nothing after he arrived in Chicago.

He was identified from cards in his possession by Mt. Lebanon police.

Daughter of 'Roxy' Married to Ad Man

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Beta C. Rothafel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Rothafel, was married yesterday to George Bijur, New York advertising man. Mr. Rothafel, the showman known as "Roxy" and who has been ill for several weeks, attended the ceremony.

The ceremony was performed in the living rom of the Rothafel home in the presence of a few intimates by Justice Harry E. Lewis, of the Brooklyn Supreme Court. "Roxy" gave the bride away.

Thurston Hall Becomes Star On Radio

We hear . . . that Thurston Hall, Pittsburgh stock favorite for many years, is to become a radio star and head the cast in "The Townsend Murder Mystery," Octavus Roy Cohen's new series starting on NBC-KDKA February 14 . . . That Don Bestor's Manhattan spot, the Lexington Grill, is becoming quite a hangout for radio celebrities, so Bestor tries out his unnamed tunes on them . . .

Mr. Hall

That "Doctor" Rockwell, who amused dialers consistently until he made a mistake about a joke, may be given another chance on the air . . . That J. P. Medbury, the wit, will replace Jay C. Flippen on CBS as a sustaining master of ceremonies . . . That Anson Weeks is collecting lullabies and revamping them into fox trot tempo . . . That Jack Denny insists on being shaved by a lady barber.

Bing Crosby's clippings indicate that he received more publicity in England than in this country last year . . . Georgie Price back on the air . . . Irene Beasley is playing vaude. . . . A choir has been added to that Jolson program. . . .

Ralph Kirbery made his first vaudeville appearance all-of-a-sudden the other night with Morton Downey between mad automobile dashes from the NBC studios in New York to an Elizabeth, N. J., theater. Less than two hours elapsed between the time they left the studios and returned. Impromptu?

Ramona, the Whiteman singing-pianist, has a secret desire to . . . roller skate! . . .

Lanny Ross is proudly telling folks about a Philadelphia baby that's been named after him. The baby's name is "Ross"—because Lanny couldn't see him start life with "Lancelot," his first name, as a handle.

Clever people, these saxophone players . . . Arnold Brillhart, saxophonist with Andre Kostelanetz' Threads of Happiness orchestra, plays five other instruments, is a radio expert with a short-wave station of his own, a licensed pilot and an expert golfer.

"Easy Aces" inaugurates a new schedule on WJAS tonight at 8. The skits will be heard hereafter each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at the same hour.

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I knew something like this would happen. Lucille Moyle, of Swissvale, staggers us with the news that she has raised from tadpole days a pet frog and every evening at the 6:30 broadcast he croaks. Is that an educated frog, I ask you or is he just annoyed? His menu consists of liver and kidney. What, no onions or chopped eggs?

Even carrier pigeons are not infallible. Here is one that lost its sense of direction. It flew into I. Berkowitz' store in Export and insists that is home. It's number is A. U. 31 W. P. 5.13. Will its owner furnish a road map or better directions?

It's robins and more robins with Denzil Holt and Hugh Rafferty, who were tramping through the woods down at Ohiopyle the other day. Hundreds of them darkened the sky. They are either badly mistaken about the weather, or are we, or perhaps the stringent times provented their southern migration this year.

The lowly mule comes into its own. Who knows where we can get a nice, pleasant, companionable one that also is a willing worker? It's for a man who lives all alone in the mountain. The letter states it must be one that will not get homesick.

All the romance has been removed from the old Shovel Works whistle in Charleroi. More bitterly contested arguments and loss of lifelong friends came about over this clarion voiced whistle than the last presidential election. After being held as the tooter that announced the end of the Spanish-American War, Andy Komoda settled the matter by stating he made it a little more than two months ago out of an old piece of case-hardened steel.

Elmer Reilly, Bellevue, submits to the Globe Trotters a scheme to increase the circulation of money—have the government issue new bills to redeem the old ones . . . Then invalidate the old ones after a certain period . . . Thus learning the whereabouts of hoarded money. Will you elaborate a bit more, Elmer? Don't forget that a paper dollar is a promise to pay and the government can't abrogate a contract.

As Smooth as an Old Gold

REMEMBER those aerial performers at the Circus? Hurled through space at a dizzy speed . . . yet they never miss! Pretty smooth, eh?

It's smoothness that makes OLD GOLD a better cigarette. Made of the choicest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, queen-leaves from the heart of the stalk, OLD GOLD gives you every quality you want in a cigarette . . . coolness, throat-ease, flavory taste appeal.

Get this again! BETTER tobacco, properly aged and cured: that's why OLD GOLD never misses in its effort to please.

Some Pittsburgh women have just received invitations to a dinner Gov. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot will give Wednesday evening in the reception room of the state Capitol for Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

And engraved in the left-hand corner of the invitations are the words "Formal dress is unnecessary." Rather unusual isn't it?

Among those invited to attend are Mrs. John M. Phillips, Mrs. J. G. Chalfant, Mrs. D. Edwin Miller and Mrs. O. B. Hughes, all leading cubwomen.

JACKET FASHION FOR EVENING TAKES A NEW FASHION TURN

THE JACKET fashion for evening clothes has taken a new turn. Every evening frock must not only have its own jacket nowadays, but the jacket must not be in evidence as a separate garment; it must look, in every way possible, a part of the dress it accompanies.

NEW EVENING dresses, following this style program, all look like afternoon dresses or dinner frocks at first sight. Many have long sleeves and highish necklines. There is nothing, with the possible exception of their length, to distinguish them from dresses for afternoon bridge. It is only when the jackets are removed that these new dresses show their evening decolletages and bare arms.

THE DRESS in today's sketch is a fashionable example of this new turn of the mode. Done in printed silk, simply cut, with raglan sleeves and what appears to be surplice blouse, this dress is suitable for the most informal dinner.

BUT UNTIE the big bow under the left arm and take off the jacket, and the dress becomes distinctly of the evening variety, prepared for the theater or dance.

NOTE THE simple cut of both dress and jacket. The bias lines of the blouse and jacket and the full skirt are in keeping with the present interest in classic lines, for both daytime and evening clothes.

* * *

THE SKETCH shows two views of the same frock—one in beige crepe, the other in ivory printed with tiny rust-colored crosses.

League of Peace Hears Talk by Mrs. Zangwill

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Pacts, treaties, the League of Nations, even universal disarmament will not prevent war, but they will all delay war and give hotheads time to cool down and settle quarrels in the natural and legal way—arbitration, Mrs. Israel Zangwill told a large audience yesterday at the luncheon given by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Mrs. Zangwill, long an ardent worker in the British peace movement, is in this country in behalf of the coming disarmament conference and at the close of her talk yesterday a resolution addressed to the conference was passed asking for disarmament.

The militarists, not the pacifists, are the sentimentalists, Mrs. Zangwill holds, for the militarists are controlled by one sentiment, fear. In a vicious circle fear leads to armaments, armaments to war and war to more fear, she said.

That universal disarmament will bring some unemployment is inescapable, the noted Englishwoman said, supplementing this with the statement that since armament workers are not productive workers—that is they are state-paid and there is no exchange for their goods—the state could just as satisfactorily pay them when idle. Munition works can be turned to industrial plants, Mrs. Zangwill said, citing the Krupp works in Germany as an example. She explained that disarmament as the pacifists desire it is to be universal and is to come over a period of years, not suddenly.

The world's annual bill for armaments is $4,750,000,000 and that of the United States was $695,000,000 last year, Mrs. Zangwill said. She claims that the burden of taxation would be lifted with disarmament, the question of war debts would be settled and prosperity would return.

Eighty-one-year-young Mr. Henry B. Lupton gave two appropriate readings and added a word of her own as forceful as those which she used from Thomas Hardy and Richard LeGallienne. Mrs. Edward O. Tabor sang a group of folk songs of all nations accompanying herself.

In the absence of Mrs. Norman W. Storer, president of the W. L., Mrs. George Bray presided.

People Should Be Sensible About Being Loyal

Does it pay to be loyal—to stick, when things look dark, and help see 'em through?

We said it did. But Martha has her doubts. Perhaps you had doubts, too; wondered if decency paid. Yes?

Then listen!

My Dear Miss Robinson:

I've just read your article talking about loyalty, and handing bouquets to people who stick when things get tough. Well, I stuck—and here is my story. It makes me wonder.

My husband and I are both in our twenties, and have been married for five years. Three years ago he lost his job. For two years he was practically without any work at all.

WENT TO PARENTS

I was very patient. I never mentioned the subject to him, because I knew it was a very sore spot. He had held an executive position, and he was badly put out at being idle.

Of course, we had to give up our apartment that we had taken so much pleasure in, and because there was no room for me with his folks, and no room for him with my folks, we parted temporarily. He went to live with his folks and I with mine.

During these two years he got odd jobs, and when he could he paid something at home. But he couldn't pay much. I had temporary positions and paid my folks when I could, too.

Now he has been working for a year, and we are not together yet. He is making a fair salary. But he insists that his folks need him, and since they gave him a "break" he is now repaying them.

DOUBTS HIS FAIRNESS

That all sounds very good, but don't you think it would be better if we were together, and managed things so we could give them something each week? I do, and I know we could do it; but he won't listen.

Do you think it is fair of him to put me off this way, when I was loyal and faithful to him? Or do you think he is right in wanting to keep on living at home?

He says, "If you don't like it this way, why don't you get a divorce?" And that hurts me a lot. I have tried to do a lot of nice things, little things, for him, like making his favorite cake when he comes here, and things like that. But I don't understand things at all, I have to be so careful, because he will start an argument over the least little thing. He has been like this ever since he started working again.

Does it really pay to be so loyal? Maybe some men appreciate it, but it doesn't seem as if he does. Please help me. Is he being fair? What shall I do? What do you think ails him?

MARTHA.

Does it pay to be loyal?

Of course it does, sister. It always pays to be regular, for your own sake. And regular people are that way for the sake of their own self-respect—not for the sake of getting a hand from somebody else. So, even if he hasn't appreciated what you've tried to be and do, you're ahead, because you've lived up to the best in you.

CALL HIS BLUFF

But, of course, that doesn't mean that any girl should waste her life going on being loyal to a man who isn't worth loyalty. You have to use sense about loyalty, just as you have to use it about buying a new dress or a jar of face cream. So I'd just put it up to him, straight from the shoulder, that he'll have to fish or cut bait.

I suspect that he's making all these excuses about "helping the folks" because these last years he has been free from responsibility. He wants to duck taking it on again, and he thinks he can keep on ducking it by threatening to quit on you. But don't let him get away with it. Call his bluff. Insist on a showdown.

Refuse to see him until he is ready to make a home for you. Maybe he will fade out permanently. If that's his secret intention, it is time you knew it. Going on as you are now won't get you anything. So if he refuses to make a real life with you, cut off the farce and do it, while you are still able to remake your life with someone who is regular.

But never, never, doubt if loyalty pays. Decency always pays.

'CAN SUCH THINGS BE?' -:- -:- -:- -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Out of the past I'll wager there's many a little feminine ghost breaks through the thin wall that divides one age from another and throws up her delicate hands at what she visions in the way of modern feminine goings-on. The plumes in her bonnet vibrate violently, her pink mouth forms a spectral "O," her little phantom heart dunts against her high-bosomed gown under its lace tucker, her bird's wing brows climb up, her eyes stretch themselves from almond-shape to bubble-shape, she is all a-twitter, agog, and a-tiptoe. Can't you imagine the honest wonder of a girl of the Seventeen-eighties or the early Eighteen-hundreds if she could witness a world Olympic and the astounding part that girls take in that Greek-like affair? Wouldn't she have an envious heart and shining eyes? I think so. Even though she had some things better than we—no sign-boards by the lovely country wayside, richer good times, and no loud-speaker from the neighbor across the way when she was trying to think—THIS is better than what she had—this body freedom, with the world her playground, even as the men, that the girl in this day's World has. This right to have the same fun her brother and her sweetheart have in the world of play and sport! A beautiful and a precious thing. And the little ghost from other days—happier than us, perhaps, in some way—she didn't have that.

"Oh, Lud!" A girl flying down a track, bare-legged, bare-armed, like a Spartan damsel, in something much smaller even than the panties of Araminta's time. With short hair flying! "Good Lack!" A girl falling from a board as high as the roof of Araminta's house into indigo water, like a slow-moving arrow. And here she comes. . .she has brown legs like a Greek boy in statues Araminta has seen, lustrous with water. . .and most of her emerging from a black garment no bigger than Araminta's silk handkerchief. A jockey, winning a race, in silks, flying around the fence in the land of the palm trees and the movie studios. "Lack-a-day! A girl!" Champions. Skaters, unhampered by the dress of a girl; in shorts and sweater and tights like her boy friend. Poor Araminta skated in a skirt to her ankles—and never WON ANYTHING! And THIS. "Oh, Gemini!" A girl in a man's over-all and leather coat, big shoes, a helmet in her hand. The air is free to her, too. She flew the Atlantic alone in a ship of the air!

Under Araminta's wonder and horror swims envy. She looks at the cobwebs of clothes and fashion that bound her, remembers that in her day to be a little free you had to be a George Sand and shock the folks, and wishes she had lived a bit later.

Even those of us fair who do none of these strenuous things love to watch the other girls do them, and are proud and glad they can.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Pernicious Anemia Is Conquered

There is consolation in knowing that a recent health survey reports a marked reduction in the number of fatal cases of pernicious anemia. Pernicious anemia was at one time a terribly dreaded disease. New knovledge concerning pernicious anemia has been acquired within recent years. The discovery of the curative value of liver has made possible the control of this affliction.

Dr. Copeland

The word anemia comes from a Greek word which means "without blood." There are three chief causes for anemia.

Blood may be lost from the body as a result of injury. It may be due to some disturbance of the mechanism within the body which prevents the blood from being formed properly. Pernicious anemia is classified in this last group.

In most instances anemia is perfectly evident from the appearance of the patient. The sufferer has a pale skin. He complains of shortness of breath, tires easily, has a poor appetite and loses weight. In other cases, though the patient does not feel well, an examination of the blood is necessary to confirm the diagnosis of anemia. By means of a "blood count" the actual destruction of the red blood cells and decrease in the coloring matter can be determined.

The administration of liver is of great value in the treatment of pernicious anemia. Many of my readers are aware of the value of this food, but perhaps few are aware that it is now possible to get liver in extract form. It can be had in powder and tablet form.

It can also be given by hypodermic injections. Recent reports appear to show that the hypodermic is the most beneficial method.

In addition to liver, it is essential that iron salts and copper salts be included in the diet. This fact has been demonstrated by recent laboratory experiments.

The food should be simple, yet wholesome and nutritious. It should include plenty of fresh fruits, vegetables, milk, cereals, cream, butter and eggs. The sufferer should have plenty of rest and an adequate number of hours of sleep. He should be outdoors and in the sunlight as much as possible.

In this disease the afflicted person may complain of mild headache, dizziness, nausea and vomiting. Though these symptoms increase in severity, the patient often refuses to consult a doctor.

In spite of having no medical care he may improve greatly and for a short time may be in fairly good health. This improved condition may last for several months, but is usually followed by a relapse. As time goes on the periods of improvement are shortened.

As is true in other ailments, early recognition of pernicious anemia is necessary for a speedy and complete cure. Never attempt to make your own diagnosis of what ails you, and under no circumstances prescribe for yourself. Consult with your physician, who will advise you and prescribe the proper medication.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

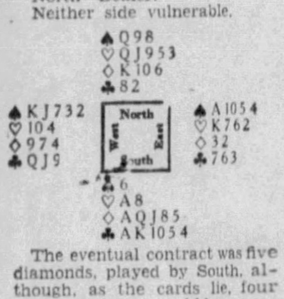
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Changing Your Campaign Plans

I frequently stress the importance of making a plan of campaign such as will be adequate to assure the making of your contract, if that is possible. However, such plans of campaign should not be fixed and unchangeable. They should be subject to change as the changing situations presented in the play make it wise to adopt a different course. Take, for example, the following:

North—Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.



The eventual contract was five diamonds, played by South, although, as the cards lie, four hearts, perhaps, would have presented an easier contract.

West's choice of an Opening lead was not easy, and he eventually decided that rather than lead from the minor tenace in spades, he would risk the lead of the club Queen, despite the fact that South had bid the suit. When the Dummy went down, South decided that the best method of making his contract would be to establish hearts in the Dummy. Before embarking on this plan, however, he drew two rounds of trumps, and won the second round with Dummy's King. He then played a low heart from Dummy, won the trick with the Ace, and returned the suit. West dropped the Ten, and East won with the King. East could now place in South's hand three diamonds out of his original holding of five, and probably an original holding of five clubs, as he had bid both minor suits. This would leave, at most, one spade in South's hand. If South's holding were six diamonds or clubs originally, game could not be saved. In order to prevent a discard of a losing spade, East now laid down the Ace, and then led a heart to give West a chance to ruff. South blocked this play by putting on an honor in diamonds, but one of Dummy's hearts had been killed for purposes of discard, and South could get only two discards in the Dummy hand. He must therefore shift his plan of campaign, and his sole hope of making the contract was to attempt to establish clubs.

As West's opening lead was the club Queen, he almost certainly held also the club Knave. The lead of a second high club should disclose the situation. It did. Both East and West followed suit, West playing the 9, leaving only the club Knave outstanding against South. South now ruffed one round of clubs with Dummy's trump, returned to his own hand by ruffing a spade, and made the rest of the tricks.

It is quite true that at the start he might have adopted the line of play which would have permitted bringing in the entire club suit, but, having elected to develop the hand by playing hearts, he is to be commended for his quick change of plan to meet the changed conditions presented by a mobile defense.

TODAY'S QUESTION

No score. North deals and bids one heart. What should South bid, holding the following hand?

♠QJ108 ♡— ◇A10743 ♣AK62

Answer: Three diamonds—a Forcing Takeout, requiring both partners to keep the bidding open until a game contract is reached. This bid is justified by South's holding of 3½ honor-tricks and the fact that the hand contains at least two stoppers in spades, diamonds and clubs in the event that the final contract is three notrump.

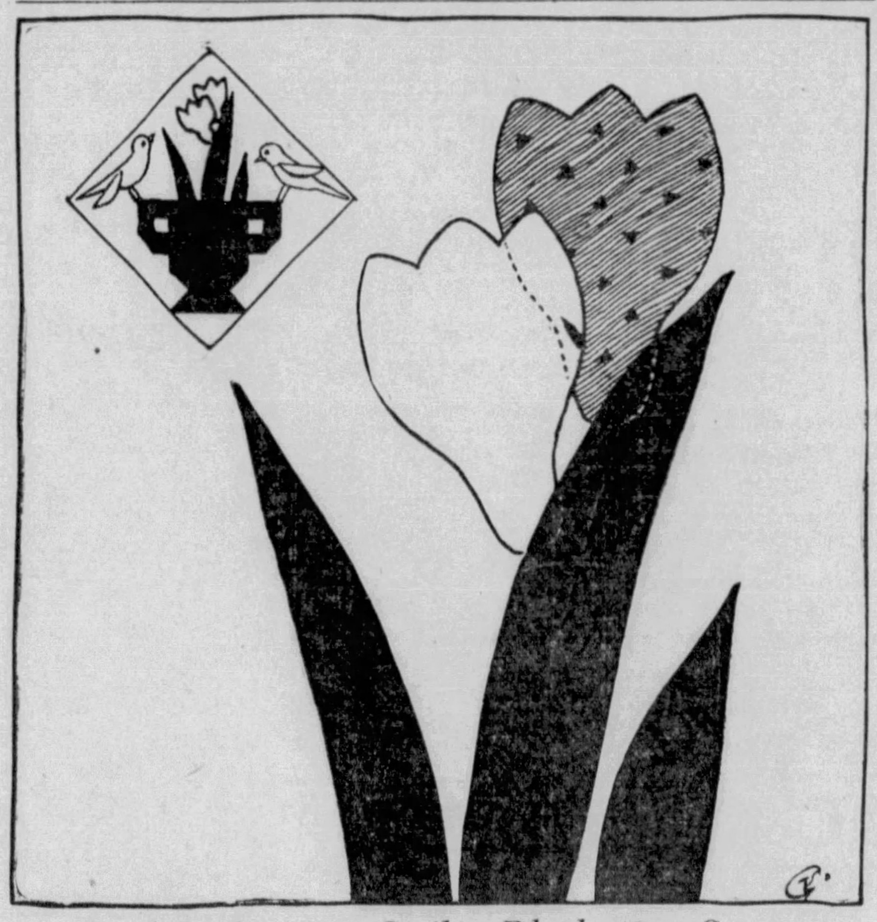
Nancy Page Quilt Club -:- By Florence La Ganke



Garden Bouquet Quilt -- Block 19 -- Crocus

When Nancy told the members last week that the coming flower would be an early spring one the members were divided between the hepatica and the trailing arbutus. But Nancy said these flowers were both too small and fragile to applique easily.

"I have to pick a larger flower, one that will adapt itself to needlework. Can't you think of a blossom which comes up, almost through the snow on your lawns and shows its head in yellow, in white or in purple?"

"Oh, you mean a crocus," they chorused. "Crocus it is," said Nancy.

The leaves are long. For the first time there is no stem shown. Instead we have three leaves, developed in fast color soft green material. Choose something which will wash and take stitchery easily.

These leaves and flowers are appliqued onto the large white triangle which is seamed to the equally large triangle of the pieced urn.

The club members could make these urns in short time, nowadays, since they had made 19 of them. You see, each flower with its pair of birds comes out of an urn. The combination of the triangle block of urn joined to triangle block of white gives a large diamond block measuring 12 inches on each one of its four sides, when seamed and joined in the quilt.

The triangles are cut 12½ by 12½ by 17½. Then when seams are taken off the finished size is 12 by 12.

In making these flowers the club members followed the usual procedure.

First, they cut the picture with its accompanying directions from the paper.

Second, they traced the design lightly onto the white triangle as indicated by the small inset drawing.

Third, they made another tracing on lightweight cardboard.

Fourth, they put the original design for safe keeping in the Nancy Page scrap book.

Fifth, they cut out the various parts in the design which had been traced on the cardboard.

Sixth, they laid these on the material from which the flowers and leaves would be made.

Seventh, they cut out the material allowing one-quarter inch on all sides for turning under raw edges.

Eighth, they turned under raw edges, basted and pressed the pieces.

Ninth, they pinned the pieces in place on the white triangle.

Tenth, they appliqued them with a slanting, invisible hemming stitch.

The birds were appliqued, and the next to the last block in the quilt was finished.

Supposing the members had been appliqueing the pieces with buttonhole stitch, then they would not have allowed the quarter inch since the buttonholing covers the raw edges.

Some members were making the quilt in outline stitch.

Others were filling in the outlined spaces with colored crayons. Then this colored space was pressed with a hot iron which set the color.

Helena's Appeal Proves a Tonic for Lillian

Dicky once said that "if Lil were in her coffin, and heard a cry for help, she would push up the lid and climb out to see what she could do." His comment was vivified for me when at the sound of Helena Brixton's wailing appeal to her, Lillian started up from the lethargy which had so alarmed me, and with eyes no longer staring but alive with quick sympathy, rushed to her friend and put her arms around Helena's quivering figure.

"Everything will be all right, I tell you," Lillian was saying over and over. "Sam's a man, not a helpless child. Who told you they had him?"

Her "they" was as vague—purposely so, I knew—as Helena's own phrasing.

"Nobody," she said. "Ronald told me his father had gone to New York to look for the girls, but I know better. Something's happened to Sam! I always know when something's happened to him."

NOT SURPRISED

There was such conviction in her tones that I shuddered at the remembrance of the blow I had seen dealt to her husband. I was not surprised at her statement, however. It always has been my belief that a man and woman who truly love each other have a certain unexplainable psychic sense of anything evil happening to either when they are apart, and there never had been any mistaking of one fact in our acquaintance with Samuel and Helena Brixton. They loved each other deeply, passionately. This was what made our suspicion of the man so horrible a thing. It did not seem possible that he could have inflicted this terror for her idolized child upon the woman he loved.

She buried her face in Lillian's shoulder as she uttered her plaint, and then she spoke as a pettish child might.

"Make her go away, Lillian. I don't want anybody else but you."

"Of course you don't," I said soothingly, and with no hint of offense. It would have been a mean-spirited person, indeed, who could have cavilled at her misery. "I'll go immediately."

Over her bent head I shaped noiseless words to Lillian, who is a fair lip reader:

"Call me if you need me. I'll be in my room."

DICKY WAKENS

She nodded, and I went to our own suite, lowering myself carefully into a chair in the sitting room and not daring even to switch on a light for fear I should disturb Dicky, asleep in the next room, who needed his rest so sorely before the ordeal of the next day.

Never have I had so hard a fight to keep awake as I did in the hours that passed before 5 o'clock, when I went in to awaken him. Usually he is hard to waken, but the importance of his quest was evidently with him, sleeping as well as waking, for he sprang up immediately and dashed for the cold shower which always puts him into shape for the day.

Dicky spoke only monosyllables, however, until he was ready to go; then he came over to me, put his arm around me, and with his other hand tilted my chin up so that his eyes looked steadily into mine.

"Here's my program for today," he said. "I'm going now to get a plane and look over that section you traveled last night. Then I'm going to put back to the airport and corral another ship for the dropping of that letter. There's no use letting those babies know that the same person who drops the money is also scouting over the countryside. Then I'll let you people know what I've discovered.

"Now we'll put that aside and talk about your program. I've a few short words to say about that, no matter how much Fal—masters of stategy and other gifted leaders are counting on your aid."

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Engagement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been going with a girl for about a year, and next month I am having a party in which to announce our engagement. Should I give the ring to the girl before I announce the engagement, or should I give it to her on the night when the engagement is announced?

DAILY READER.

First, dear sir, it isn't at all good form, or even acceptable form, for you, the man, to announce the engagement, or to give a party announcing the engagement. This party, if a party is given (which isn't necessary), should be given by the girl's parents, or by some member of her family, or by herself.

The engagement ring should be given when you and your fiancee are alone. This isn't, and it shouldn't be, a public occasion. The girl wears her engagement ring for the first time in public when her engagement is announced, but it is given to her before this "under four eyes" only.

A Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would thank you to advise me if it is the usual custom for the young man's parents to present a gift to the young lady to whom he is to become engaged, and if it is, will you kindly offer some suggestions for a proper gift? The parents are only in medium circumstances. L.

This gift isn't necessary, or not even customary, but it is, of course, thoroughly proper, if the parents of the young man wish to do it.

This gift, if it is given, is usually one of a personal nature, varying from the later gifts, which are usually for the new home. An evening bag, perhaps, or a dresser set, or a traveling clock, or a fitted suit-case, or some lingerie, or monogrammed handkerchiefs, or a handsomely-bound book, or a portfolio or other leather accessory for her desk.

STEEL DIVIDEND REDUCTION HINTED

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Wall street's interest in the dividend meeting of the directors of the United States Steel Corporation next Tuesday was heightened today, when it was stated in authoritative sources that the public should be prepared for a change in the $7 annual rate on the preferred shares.

It was felt in Wall street banking quarters that public sentiment should not be much affected by a reduction in the dividend, in view of the fact that recent payments have been entirely from surplus, at a time when large losses were being reported.

PAYMENT CUMULATIVE

Six months ago, directors warned that improvement in business would be essential if the dividend was to be continued, but since then, the company has shown large deficits. Dividends on the stock are cumulative, so any reduction in payments at this time will have to be made up later. The $1.75 quarterly payments have been made regularly since formation of the company in 1901.

Fourth quarter earnings of the company were no better than in the third quarter, leading close students of the business to believe that a fourth quarter deficit, before dividend payments, would be reported in an amount of $20,000,000. Final 1932 figures will be announced after the directors' meeting.

BOARD OPINION VARIES

Not all directors are of the same mind in regard to continuing the present annual $7 dividend rate on the company's 3,602,811 shares of preferred stock, it was reliably reported. To do so entails a quarterly disbursement of $6,304,919, or at the rate of $25,219,676 a year.

The position of Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the board, was stated on July 26, 1931, when he said that surplus of the company had been drained $73,063,548 in the preceding 12 months in order to make up the deficit from operations, the four quarterly preferred payments and one common dividend payment which amounted to $13,054,678.

Federal Prisoner Taken to Detroit

H. Henry Bloom, 25, of Detroit, last night was taken there by Deputy United States Marshals John Lowers and Thomas McFarlane. He was said to be wanted in the Federal Court there for violation of conditions upon which his sentence was suspended after he was convicted of misuse of the mails in stock selling.

He was arrested here three weeks ago while employed in a Fifth avenue hosiery store.

Temporary Dry Writs Granted Here

Temporary injunctions were granted yesterday in Federal Court against a store at 1728 Forbes street, at which George Sattler was named as proprietor, and a barroom at 1424 Fifth avenue, of which Joe Alton and Harry Hill were named as proprietors. Prohibition authorities had charged dry law violations on the premises. Final hearings will be held March 14.

Your Income Tax

Graduated Surtax Rates Now Levied On Incomes

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

(This is the sixth of a series of articles analyzing the Revenue Act of 1932 and discussing the problems of income tax payers.)

The preparation of an income tax return for the great majority of individuals who receive their income entirely from wages or salaries and who have not been engaged in outside business transactions, such as the sale of property, should be a comparatively simple matter.

Many of these individuals can save themselves money by taking advantage of certain allowable deductions which will be discussed later. For the purpose of simplicity, we shall disregard these deductions at present.

The normal tax rate is 4 per cent on the first $4,000 of taxable income in excess of the deductions for personal exemption and credit for dependents. The rate is 8 per cent on any remaining income. In addition, surtax rates are levied on incomes in excess of $6,000. The surtax rates increase with the amount of income. On incomes in excess of $6,000 but less than $10,000, the surtax is 1 per cent. On incomes in excess of $10,000 but less than $12,000, the rate is 2 per cent of the excess over $10,000. The rate continues to increase by such steps until the maximum of 55 per cent is attained on incomes in excess of $1,000,000.

No deductions are made for personal exemptions or credit for dependents in computing the surtax.

To provide an example of a simple tax return, let us assume the case of a married man with one child who earned $5,000 in 1932.

His personal exemption would be $2,500, plus $400 credit for his child. This would make a total deduction of $2,900, which should be subtracted from income before computing the tax. This deduction would leave $2,100 for taxable income on which he would be required to pay 4 per cent or $84. This may be paid in four instalments of $21 each. More complex returns will be discussed in the future.

Missouri Pacific Bonds Authorized

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—(INS.)—The Interstate Commerce Commission today authorized the Missouri Pacific Railroad to issue $10,000,000 of 5 per cent gold mortgage bonds and to pledge them with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Railroad Credit Corporation as collateral security for loans.

P. R. R. President Lauds Loree's Confidence

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Gen. William W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who arrived in St. Louis yesterday on a tour of inspection, said that while rail carriers have strong competition, the "day of the railroads' greatness is not over." He said:

"Mr. L. F. Loree showed proper confidence in investing heavily in New York Central. Such a property is part of the bankbone of America."

While he was not expecting the turn of the corner "at any time now," Gen. Atterbury said that "in general there are a few encouraging signs."

LOCAL STEEL OUTPUT ON UPGRADE

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel ingots increased slightly this week, to a rate close to 17 per cent, against last week's 16 per cent rate. The only marked increase was in the Chicago district, which rose to a 13 per cent rate, while the Pittsburgh district remained at about 14 per cent though with an upward trend. The January average is expected to show a slight increase over December's 15.02 per cent.

Thus far in the year seasonal increase in steel demand has been less than usual and February and March are expected to bring more substantial gains.

It is thought that demand for wire products and sheets would be somewhat heavier were it not for recent declines and irregularities in prices. Wire products appear to be steady at the lower figures, but as they are not regarded as formal or official there is doubt.

Sheet prices have softened a trifle more, but by reason of declines are steadier and the market ranges are narrowed. Common black sheets have had the smallest decline since the first of the year, $2 a ton, cold rolled sheets coming next, while galvanized sheets have had the largest decline, about $5 a ton.

HEAVY PRODUCTS STEADY

Plates and shapes have firmed up by way of concessions on large tonnage for structural fabricating being reduced to old-time proportions. Thereby greater assurance is given of maintenance of the price on merchant bars, held rigidly for many months.

Automobile production has increased slightly and January is expected to show a distinct gain over December's production, approximately 110,000 cars and trucks, United States and Canada. Last year's total has been estimated at slightly over 1,430,000, or a shade over 25 per cent of 1929 while steel production was about 24 per cent of 1929. In each year the automotive industry accounted for approximately 18 per cent of the steel made, while in the last few weeks the proportion has been fully 25 per cent.

Railroads have been giving a few small releases on old contracts for rails while regular annual buying is expected to develop next month. Freight surcharges imposed a year ago as an emergency measure expire March 31 and plans for repairs to rolling stock may be held back until an extension is granted. Freight car loadings when adjusted for seasonal variation continue to show 12 to 13 per cent gain over the low period, in the three weeks ended August 20.

SMALL ORDERS GAIN

Farm implement makers have been buying steel in the last three weeks in a limited way, but representing a substantial increase.

Fabricated structural steel awaids continue to run light. Miscellaneous demand for sheets and strips, outside the automobile industry, has been increasing in line with the recent theory that early increase in steel demand generally would come from the wide range of small consumers rather than from the large classes.

The tin plate industry continues to run at about 45 per cent, and as this is slightly above the rate of a year ago a favorable augury is made for this year to pass last year's production, which was about 55 per cent of record high, in 1929.

The local scrap market continues to be altogether inactive. Market quotations have not changed on any important grades for more than two weeks, showing the market to be in balance, lack of consumer demand being equaled by lack of distress offerings.

Woman Badly Hurt By Hit and Run Auto

Mrs. Dora Burford, 58, of 1918 Perrysville avenue, was in Allegheny General Hospital today in a serious condition—the second victim of a hit-run driver within 24 hours. She was hit as she crossed Diamond street, near Federal street, and suffered a probable broken back.

A few hours later R. J. Braun, Jr., 34, of 1103 Orvis street, Etna, driving an automobile bearing license plates corresponding to the number obtained by Patrolman Earl Means, who saw the accident, was held on a charge of violating the automobile laws.

GRACE LOOKS FOR NATURAL RECOVERY

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, is one business leader who usually tells us bluntly what the facts are. He speaks like a busy man who does not find it worth while to figure out a lot of optimistic bunk. Perhaps he thinks that it does not pay.

Pointing to the steady low level of his company's business, he now says:

"How long we will stay there, no one knows. There is nothing in the orders which we are receiving which indicates an upturn.

"One of these days business will turn up, and I don't think it will be as long as a lot of persons think."

MAY BE AT BOTTOM

That is good straight stuff and rings true. The steel business is very low, but may be at bottom. There is no sign of recovery, but that will come in time, and sooner than those who fear ruin and revolution are predicting. I say, amen!

The real pessimists on American business are those who think that it will die at once unless it is given a lot of morphine, oxygen and alcohol right away. Like Mr. Grace, I believe business will get well in a natural way. I distrust the business doctors, and the more after their performances of the last three years.

While I don't agree with much that Mr. Green, of the American Federation of Labor says, I do agree that one of the things American business badly needs is more plain honesty and square dealing.

ANALYSIS NECESSARY

The first step toward a sound and sustained recovery is a searching analysis of the obstacles to recovery. And this should be connected with a full and frank study of the causes of the decline.

A sick man may muddle through and get will, but if we want really to cure his disease, we must go to its cause and must overcome the real obstacles to his recovery.

Just so, if we want to do anything for business more than alleviating the sufferings of the poor, we must diagnose the trouble with the utmost care. We have had too much shooting in the dark.

ADJUSTMENTS FOUGHT

Business recovery will come whenever the obstacles to recovery are removed or overcome.

Every depression, big or little, is brought on by certain maladjustments. Some sort of inflation is always one of the forerunners.

So it was in 1929. But instead of correcting the maladjustments and getting rid of inflation, we have done everything to fight the necessary adjustments.

We have denied the existence of maladjustments and said the whole thing is "psychological." Each month we have heard that the "turn" was around the corner and that we should "buy now."

We have thrown good credit after bad and "sound" insolvent situations, thus keeping frozen credit frozen. And now some are calling for the soft-money doctors.

I see no way to forecast when business recovery will come. The only wise course is to study the obstacles and say that when they are surmounted the turn will occur. (I think that is about what Mr. Loree means when he says that business may turn up next fall if unforeseen difficulties do not arise).

STOCK MARKET PRICES DROP AGAIN

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Stocks stagged in the early trading today, numerous dividend-paying shares receding from fractions to a point.

United States Steel common and preferred shares lost a point, or so. American Tobacco B, Liggett & Myers B, American Can, Borden and Union Pacific dropped substantial fractions. Eastman was down more than a point. Minor losses developed in Sears Roebuck, Radio-Keith-Orpheum, Westing house Electric, Corn Products, New York Central, Canadian Pacific and Chesapeake and Ohio. Consolidated Gas was steady. United Fruit and Woolworth gained small fractions. American Telephone was inactive.

Published discussions of the prospect of a reduction in United States Steel's preferred dividend, already widely expected in Wall street, featured the overnight news. Directors meet next Tuesday, and it was reliably reported that another large deficit would be shown in the earnings statement for the fourth quarter.

Week-end business reviews reported scattered improvement, leading to the hope that the usual seasonal pickup in business, which normally appears toward the end of January, may be materializing.

The Radio-Keith-Orpheum equity receivership caused no surprise in market circles and was probably not a factor in the market.

The pound sterling rallied 1 5-16 cents at the opening, carrying cables rates to $3.39 3-16. French francs eased a shade.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Testimony

We are her lips; we meant to be more tender
But she has shocked us with a scarlet dress,
We are her restless fingers, ringed and slender,
We are her eyes, whose depths no lovers guess.

We are her hands, as empty as her laughter,
We are the hands no lover yet can fill;
We are the gifts she still keeps seeking after,
Another dress, a diamond and a thrill.

We are the words the wise men speak about her,
"A tinsel valentine" is what they say,
As if their wisdom let them do without her,
As if she never scorned the price they pay.

We are her lips; we meant to be more tender,
We are her eyes whose depths no lads can guess;
And with a single question we defend her,
Who asks for better than she gives, or less.

—Eleanor McCrea.

No Laughing Matter!

Jules Levine forwards the fact concerning the Broadway flop producer, who had cut the cast's wages again and again and again! He happened backstage last night just in time to hear one of the troupe complain:

"I've been cut so much, I'm getting no salary at all!"

"Such ingratitude," shrieked the producer, "everybody's looking for jobs—and he a'n't satisfied just to be working!"

Hehehah

Al Brackman parodies:

"She has a school-girl complexion—REFORM school!"

The Very Idea!

A prisoner in an up-State jail wrote home groaning about the treatment he was receiving. His mother wrote to the warden, relaying her boy's allegations. The warden wrote the mother saying that he and his men were doing the best they could for her son.

"What do you mean—the best you can do?" replied the parent indignantly. "You'd think he was out in the world, the way he's being treated!"

Add Slanguage

The slanguage used by the waiters in Dinty Moore's restaurant fascinated us the other sundown when, while seated in the rear near the chef, we heard a waiter ask for:

"Two nose warmers!"

"What's a nose warmer?" we asked Moore.

"Consomme in a cup," he explained, as he told the chef to prepare "five bouquets!"

"What's a bouquet?" we asked.

"A side order of lettuce with a slice of tomato on top!"

Noel Coward Notes

Observations at the swankiest of the play premieres this season, when Noel Coward's new hit, "Design for Living," arrived at the Barrymore Theater Tuesday night: The 8:25 curtain warning to the privileged, who begged for the $11-each tickets and promised to be there on time and not disturb others . . . Several of the stiff-shirted, however, purposely came late, and some couldn't penetrate the impregnable traffic near the theater . . . The tardy ones included Jack Warner, the movie impresario; Adolph Zukor, ditto, and John Zandt, who are all Hollywood-mannered . . . Tony Soma, the original "Tony's;" John Krimsky, who presented the movie, "Maedchen in Uniform;" Tallulah Bankhead, Dwight Wiman, Herb Swope, Bernard Baruch and others were nuisances, and Beth Leary's dinner party arrived past 8:45—20 minutes after the show began Naughty, naughties! . . . The event attracted such nice people as Amelia Earhart and Lillian Gish . . . Some of the customers even brought their own wives! . . . The Barrymore, a difficult theater to enter and exit, also features an usher at the narrow entrance who points to your aisle, and she is a help . . . But why the coatroom attendant, who begs for your coat and doesn't budge when you want to get in or out? . . . First time I ever heard Gil Gabriel laugh loud . . . An orchid to Noel Coward for starting what other actors should copy, viz.: Coward choked one of those first-entrance receptions by turning his back on the audience until they stopped their foolishment.

Form of Criticism

Kelcey Allen, the most popular dramatic critic among his colleagues, paused to chat with a contemporary.

"Why doesn't the Mrs. come with you to the new shows anymore?" asked Allen. "Don't tell me that she can't stand First-Nights?"

"No," replied the other critic, "just first-nighters."

First-Night Sight

A couple of celebrity hunters went to a first night performance just to be able to rub elbows with the biggies. They could only obtain "single" seats, located in different parts of the house, so they parted until intermission. At the end of Act I they met in the foyer and began bragging about which well-knowns they recognized.

"I'm sitting next to a critic!" one of them boasted.

"Gee!" gee'd the other, "how do you know?"

"He's sleeping!" was the retort.

The controversy between Magistrate Hirshfield, of the Traffic Court, and Officer Conroy, who gave the Judge a ticket for passing a red light and obstructing traffic, turned out the way we all feared.

The hasty-tempered Judge asked the cop's superiors to punish him—and fixed things so that his own charge was dismissed. The same day he sent other motorists to jail or fined them!

Magistrate Hirshfield might have won an admirer or two by not doing anything of the sort. A good showman would not have had the cop punished and he would have urged his Judge to fine him $10 to prove that he doesn't consider himself better than other red-light passers.

Helen Hayes In Belasco Drama

By GEORGE SEIBEL

With Helen Hayes, Ramon Novarro, Warner Oland and Lewis Stone as the resurrectionists, that fine old Belasco thriller of Chinatown, "The Son-Daughter," came gloriously to life at the Penn Theater yesterday. And it showed a new aspect of the dainty Helen Hayes, as she utters a tragic prayer-curse at the close, addressed to the Supreme Joss, which Lady Macbeth could hardly make more ferocious. That is right after she has strangled her wicked and murderous husband with his queue on his bridal night. When such things were done by Lenore Ulric, they were accepted as a matter of course. But Helen Hayes with her fluttering voice and marshmallow smile—this is indeed a revelation!

Mr. Seibel

All four of the stars act admirably, but Helen Hayes deserves some extra geraniums. She runs the gamut from daughterly affection to patriotic fury, and almost has the audience believing that she is really a Star-Blossom of the Orient. Ramon Novarro as the Prince also is made up well enough to fool a Sinologue. Oland is oleaginously villainous and Stone paternally benevolent. As for the Chinese Dragons and other figures in the wedding festival—the hatchet men and the Sea Crab and the images of the mighty Joss—these are spectacular, horrific and would scare the old Wizard Belasco himself.

It is a well-made picture, full of thrills and worth watching. There is also an animated "Parade of the Toys," which is ingenious and amusing, making up for a rather vulgar and stupid exhibition by the Taxi Boys. The taste of some Hollywood producers is in their mouths.

Story Picked For Clara

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 28.—They'll probably have to do some tall talking, but Fox wants Clara Bow to make a second picture, "Marie Gallant," as soon as she returns from Europe.

Just what the red-head's reaction will be is difficult to say. She reiterated to London newspapermen that she had rather live on the ranch than make pictures, and that she was going to demand plenty of action and a negligible amount of dialogue in her next film.

"Marie Gallant" can very well supply that. Taken from the novel of Jacques Deval, it is the story of a turbulent French girl living in Panama.

Other possible recommendations to Clara are the facts that William K. Howard, one of the cinema's better directors, will be in charge of the picture, and that Spencer Tracy, rugged but popular Fox star, is practically set for the hero. It was for this picture, in fact, that Tracy was summoned back from a vacation in Havana and head for Hollywood.

There'll be nothing definite about Clara, of course, until she returns. Latest reports advance the date considerably.

High Finance In Warner

By MARGARET RUSSELL

Can you imagine an ex-convict masseur having the "inside" of a billion-dollar scandal at his finger tips? Well, that's what happens in the Warner this week. Robert Montgomery, as "Fingers" Partos, who would like his kid brother "Babe" to be "best people," is the Man of the Hour—for an hour. And then he realizes, what every good newspaper man knows, that "there's nothing so dead as yesterday's news."

If that sounds like a jumble, it'll all be clear to you when you see "The Billion-Dollar Scandal." "Fingers," on parole, lands himself a good rubbing job with one of Wall Street's "big shots." On tips overheard in his employer's home, he makes a small fortune in the market and gives his young brother a real start in life.

But when Doris, the financier's daughter "falls" for little brother, her parent hands out a false tip and the Brothers Partos take a skid toward financial oblivion and the loss of two good jobs. "Fingers" then becomes the self-appointed champion of Wall Street's "sucker list" and spills the beans about shady deals he overheard in the gymnasium of his former boss. The latter and his associates get nervous and offer "Fingers" a bribe. When that fails they employ other measures.

Two pals of "Fingers" are framed on a murder charge and the price of their freedom is his disappearance before the impending Senate investigation occurs. Which puts "Fingers" in a very tough spot, where we'll leave him, and let the screen tell you how it all comes out.

Broadways Of the World — All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

EN ROUTE FROM BERLIN TO PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia: What is there for me to write about on a train such as this? I might tell you, of course, that the scenery is quite beautiful and that there is a great deal of activity in the industrial centers through which we occasionally pass. Yes, I might tell you many things along these lines—but who would give a hoot?

I think I'll write something a little different today. If you'll pardon the interruption in the travel tour, I'd like to Rosa at the moment, because Rosa is thousands of miles away. do a column about Rosa. Silly of me to be thinking about She's probably fixing up my apartment now and wondering when that crazy employer of hers will return.

I like Rosa—and I miss her. Back home, Rosa is my maid, my cook, my official worrier and my doctor. When I arise in the morning and I look slightly bleary, Rosa takes one look and brings me a huge tomato juice. If I look cheerful, she hurries out for a chopped steak. If I ask her what day it is, she gets the bromo-seltzer. And if I am angry about something, she just closes the kitchen door and ignores me.

Rosa has been with me about three years now, and so well does she know me that I feel certain she must have been with me in some previous experience. How old is she? Well, if memory serves me correctly, she once showed me a picture of her little grandaughter in Germany. But I hasten to assure you that Rosa is still very, very young.

I think I first grew to like Rosa a very great deal on the day that Barney, my English bulldog, ate the cactus plant. Barney wasn't more than seven or eight months of age when Rosa joined the family and he wasn't particularly fond of anyone. But I noted from his actions that the dog sort of went for Rosa in a big way. So that made her okay with me.

Well, I arose one morning to find Rosa in a set of semi-hysterics in the kitchen. Where was Barney and what had happened? Between sobs, Rosa informed me that Barney was in the nearest hospital. Somebody had sent me a small cactus plant for a present (there's a present for you!) and Barney had eaten it during the night. Result: One dog hospital in a hurry.

Knowing Barney, I needed no further explanation. The dog had undoubtedly nosed around the plant. One of the points had probably pricked his nose. He had grown angry and snapped at it. The cactus had got into his throat and made him angrier than ever. He went back at the plant, and the more he ate, the more it hurt him. But he wouldn't quit until he had bitten the plant to bits—and had a thousand little needles in his throat.

By the time Rosa finished telling me what the dog doctor had done to Barney and how it had been necessary to give the poor animal an anesthetic in order to draw out the needles, she was in terrible shape. She grew rapidly worse. And in 10 minutes it was necessary to summon a doctor.

As a result, it cost $10 to cure Barney and slightly more to cure Rosa just because of one little cactus plant. But I didn't mind. It was worth 10 times the sum to meet someone who could love a dog that much . . .

Then there was the time Rosa was hurt in the subway. Not badly hurt, to be sure, but a rather painful accident at that. She was just stepping from the platform to the train when the cars gave a sudden jerk and she was thrown to the ground with her foot caught in the door. Fortunately, the train came to an immediate halt.

She had a decidedly good accident case and I sent her to my attorney as soon as she was able to come to work. She told him exactly what had happened, and he told me shortly after that the company would be happy to settle for $500.

A month went by and Rosa said no more about her case. I mentioned it to my lawyer one day and he said that Rosa hadn't communicated with him since. When I reached home that night, I asked her what the reason was. She seemed slightly embarrassed.

"Ach, Mr. Hellinger," she said, "I forgot to tell you. A young man from the subway company came around and gave $25 to sign a little paper and forget about the accident. So I signed it."

"Why, Rosa," I cried. "You were hurt in that accident. The company would gladly have given you $500. Why did you settle for $25?"

"Well," she returned, "he was such a nice young man and he said the company was so sorry about it all. didn't have the heart to refuse him . . ."

What I wait for from Rosa, however, are the quaint expressions that she sometimes employs. Most of them, I suppose, are German semi-proverbs that she learned as a child and has never forgotten. She translates them freely to suit her purposes and they pop out every now and then. When they do, they fit the situation so perfectly that I fall right over.

I came back from a trip of some sort, for example, a couple of years ago. I've forgotten where it was at the moment, but I do remember that it was a place where the living conditions were pretty awful.

"Yes," I said, "I don't doubt it, Rosa. And it's because I didn't eat anything all the time I was away."

She asked me why I hadn't eaten.

"Well," I asserted, "I just couldn't. Everything seemed so doggone dirty. The food didn't look right. I had a hunch they were putting all kinds of mixtures in that food."

She tapped my arm.

"You should have eaten anyhow," was her reply, "and you must never feel that way again. After all, who knows what makes the pig fat?" . . .

Then there's the classic of them all. I bounced into the house one night and hugged Rosa delightedly.

"Tonight, Rosa," I cried, "we're going to celebrate. Just you and I. We're going to do the town. We'll go to the Guinan Club. And then we'll go to another club. And then another. We'll drink wine, Rosa. Just you and I."

She looked at me quizzically. She knew very well that, before an hour went by, I'd forget all about the invitation.

"All right," she said, "I'll go. But sit down first and have your dinner. Then we talk about it."

I sat down, but I kept up a running chatter of the night that was to come. It wasn't long before it was obvious that she would really have enjoyed going. I put down my fork and knife suddenly.

"But, Rosa," I said, "there's one thing you mustn't forget. You won't get home until 7 o'clock in the morning. Don't you think you'll miss your husband?"

She sighed.

"Listen, Mr. Hellinger," was her retort, "every night we don't care for potato salad!"

Yes, I miss Rosa. Wonder if she misses me? . . .

Cagney Splits Honors In Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

James Cagney, who jumped quickly to the top of the heap in filmland, and then jumped right out of the studio without even tipping his hat to the boss, or saying anything except: "I hope your toothbrush sheds bristles," jumped right back on the top of the heap again in "Hard to Handle," screen comedy that opened yesterday in the Stanley.

Yes, Mr. Cagney comes back strongly in this swiftly-moving bale of nonsense, but he can scarcely be said to top the cast alone. The best decision he gets is a draw for first honors, thanks to one of those pesky "picture-stealers" who bob up occasionally to keep the nominal star from having everything his own way. This time it is a woman, Ruth Donnelly, in the form of a pest, the type that one would enjoy giving the axe in real life, but who makes us scream with delight when she is on the screen.

Especially to be thankful for in "Hard to Handle" is the fact that Cagney no longer is the woman-slapper and hard guy, but is allowed to make use of his dynamic force in another direction. True, he does sock a couple of lads, but no dames. He's a press agent! "Stick to me and I'll put a gold spoon right in your kisser" is his slogan. So he press-agents a marathon dance, a treasure hunt, a flesh reducer, a fund crusade for a college, a Florida land campaign that lands him in jail, a grapefruit diet that gets him out, and, last of all, a change of mind in the girl who had accepted him and then turned him down when a vamp made him look bad. And the gold spoon was right there for her "kisser," too. A swell portrayal by Cagney.

Miss Donnelly's part is that of a widow whose daughter, Mary Brian, wins the marathon, and gets only sore feet. Mother promotes daughter's matrimonial chances as vigorously as Cagney does his projects, and veers with every romantic wind. A nuisance, but a grand part for an actress, and how Miss Donnelly does act it!

Miss Brian is a blonde in this picture and does satisfactory work as the lass who fills the heart and thought of Mr. Cagney insofar as romance is concerned. Claire Dodd and Gavin Gordon also give good account of themselves in principal roles.

PITT, W. VA. TEAMS CLASH

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Quint Covers Wide Area. Dukes Head for Title.
Southpaw Brother Act. Watson Upsets Dope.
Benton Keeps on at 44. Ross Title Prospect.

MOUNTAINEERS TAKE IN EIGHT STATES

WHEN IT COMES to having the various states of the Union represented on its roster, the West Virginia University basketball team, which meets the Pitt passers at the Stadium tonight, is very much like Notre Dame. The Irish always have been noted for drawing students from all over the country, and the Morgantown basketeers are not far behind them. Coach Francis X. Stadsvold has no fewer than eight states represented on his Mountaineer floor squad.

F. X. Stadsvold

Pennsylvania contributed one player in William Gadd, of Uniontown. West Virginia can claim Capt. Wilbur Sortet, Joe Stydahar, giant center of whom much is expected, Fred Wilson, Elmer Gower, Patsy Slate, George Ayersman and Herb Stewart. Jesse Weiner hails from New Jersey. Bill Klug, star guard, calls Indiana his home state. Eck Allen and Louis Fidler are all-America scholastic stars from Kentucky. Charles Goodwin comes from Ohio, Herman Gallin from New York, and Dave Fromer from Connecticut. This is in striking contrast to the Pitt array, the Panther squad being made up entirely of Pennsylvania boys, all of them residing within a 100-mile radius of Pittsburgh.

THE GIANTS WILL add another brother act to the baseball show in the spring by taking Pitcher Carl Hubbell's younger brother, Merritt, on the training trip to Los Angeles. Not only is Merritt also a pitcher, but, like Carl, he is left-handed. The latter similarity is most unusual in the big leagues.

In fact, there is recalled readily only one previous instance in which two southpaw hurlers came up to the majors from the same family. They were the Wiltse brothers, from Syracuse. Lou broke in with Pittsburgh's first pennant winners in 1901, the Pirates trading three players for him, but he did not last. George joined the Giants in 1904 and was a fixture for 11 seasons.

THE NEW YORK club was disappointed in one previous experiment with pitching brothers, as Hank Mathewson proved to be just about as bad as Christy was good, but there was another instance in which the Giants had better luck. That was when Jess Barnes took his kid brother, Virgil, to camp.

If Merritt Hubbell shows as much stuff as Virgil Barnes did, Bill Terry will be fortunate. For though never quite as good a pitcher as Jess was at his best, Virgil turned out to be very serviceable.

PITTSBURGH FANS WILL recall an episode in which Virgil Barnes figured while the Giants were playing a series at Forbes Field. The pitcher sneaked out of the hotel after hours one night and in sneaking back had the misfortune to wrench an ankle. He couldn't pitch next day and told Manager McGraw he had slipped in his bathtub. It wasn't such a good alibi when McGraw discovered there was no tub in Virgil's room, promptly fining the pitcher $100. But Ed Murphy tells of a happy ending to the story. A promotion man for a bathmat manufacturer gave Barnes $300 for an indorsement of the idea that a mat in his bathroom would have forestalled the injury. So Virgil pocketed a profit of $200.

Rube Benton

SPEAKING OF OLD pitchers, Rube Benton continues to stand out as one of the game's age marvels. An injury to his pitching hand was thought to have ended his career a couple of years ago, but he came back in such great style that he led the American Association hurlers last season while working for Donie Bush in Minneapolis.

And now he is getting ready for another campaign in defiance of Old Man Time, though he is 44 and started pitching 25 years ago. Benton was with the Pirates for a few days in 1915 until awarded to the Giants.

HAVING DEFEATED CARNEGIE Tech last night, 37 to 25, those Dukes are in a fair way to repeat for the city basketball title. Duquesne now can get no worse than a tie with either rival in the club-against-club series.

It still is possible for Pitt to finish first in percentage if the Panthers win both of their remaining games and Carnegie topples the Dukes in their second tilt. But beating out a team that has won four out of five games from its two rivals on the floors of the latter, as the Bluffites have done in two seasons, is quite a sizable contract.

THE TRAGIC FATE of Phar Lap, Australian wonder horse, which died shortly after making a brilliant start at Agua Caliente last year, has not deterred the owner, David J. Davis, from taking a second chance. Racing followers are awaiting the arrival of another horse that Davis is sending from the Antipodes for a campaign on North American tracks. This one is Pillow Fight, due to arrive in California next week from New Zealand on the Mariposa, and thence to be transferred to Agua Caliente to run in the big $50,000 handicap at the Mexican course on March 26.

BY WINNING THE decision over Fidel La Barba last night after an unimpressive showing in trial bouts, Seaman Watson demonstrated again that you can't judge a fighter by his gymnasium form.

La Barba isn't as good as he used to be, and it will be a different proposition for Watson to beat Kid Chocolate, yet the Seaman, weathering two knockdowns to win out, has proved himself a much better fighter than anybody previously rated him.

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT BOXING fans will get a look at one of the newest sensations in the fight game next Monday night, when Barney Ross, rising Jewish lightweight, of Chicago, meets Johnny Datto in the main bout at Motor Square Garden.

Barney Ross

Tony Canzoneri some time ago rated Ross the most formidable coming contender for his lightweight title, and the youngster has been making a record that indicates Tony may have made the right guess. In addition to being a good boxer, Barney carries a sock in each hand, and appears to have everything needed to carry him to the top.

ROSS ADMITS THAT he was actuated only by business motives in taking up boxing. He figured he could make more money by fighting than in any other way, and even in his amateur days he was a professional at heart, looking forward to the time when he would be well paid for his ring work. When Barney was in his early 'teens, his father, proprietor of a grocery in Chicago's Ghetto, was shot and killed by two men who held up the store. Selling out the business after running it for a time with his brother, Barney worked at odd jobs while completing a two-year high school course. Then he entered the boxing game.

Maryland Tracks Show Betting Drop

BALTIMORE, Jan. 28. (INS.)—Pari-mutuel betting at Maryland tracks suffered nearly a $10,000,000 decrease in 1932 over the previous year, according to the Racing Commission.

Pari-mutuel wagers totaled $35,306,932 last year as compared with $45,232,587 in 1931. The four major tracks — Pimlico, Bowie, Havre de Grace and Laurel —operated at deficits throughout the year. Havre de Grace reported a deficit of $104,503 and Pimlico $30,606. Stockholders were paid out of a reserve fund.

The Commission urged sharp reduction of operating expenses this season to cut deficits.

The South and Perry High School basketball teams retained possession of the lead in their respective sections of the City League, one player was barred for participating in an outside game and charges made against another as the first half race in the city loop was concluded yesterday.

South put down a threatening Connelley uprising in Section I, 24 to 23, to keep its slate clear of defeat and to retain possession of the sectional lead. In Section II, Perry defeated Oliver, 30 to 19, to match South's pace.

Connelley gave South a great battle, overcoming an early South lead to cut the advantage of the South Siders to a single point at the end of the game.

GARCIA INELIGIBLE

Joe Garcia, star center of the Fifth Avenue team, was to have completed his high school playing career against Schenley yesterday, but was declared ineligible just before game time for having played for the I. K. S. reserves against the Y. M. H. A. B team Thursday night. When questioned by Coach Briggs, Garcia denied the charge, but he later was identified by another player who took part in the game as having been a contestant and Coach Briggs then refused to talk with him. Garcia will be graduated at mid-term.

One of the mainstays of the Schenley team also was mentioned as having been in action for an outside team, the Trojans, and Coach Walter Gross declared he would undertake an immediate investigation. He will forfeit all games played by Schenley in the City League this season if he finds any of his players have been guilty of violating the rules.

FIFTH PASSERS WIN

In other City League frays, in Section I, Fifth defeated Schenley, 35 to 28, and Allderdice downed Westinghouse, 39 to 25. In Section II, South Hills won over Carrick, 53 to 21 and Allegheny topped Langley, 28 to 23.

There was action aplenty in the W. P. I. A. L. In Section I, Har-Brack upset Tarentum, winning 31 to 21. In Section II, Bellevue continued its fast pace by turning back Avalon, 19 to 13. Monessen defeated Charleroi in Section V, 39 to 22, and in Section VIII, Scott defeated the defending league champions from Braddock, 22 to 21, in a hectic battle, while Rankin's victory string was snapped by Ed Pauline's Swissvale scrappers, 27 to 26. The game was played on the Rankin floor.

MT. LEBANON COPS

In other contests, Hurst trounced Mt. Pleasant, 40 to 13; Coraopolis trimmed McKees Rocks, 27 to 14; Mt. Lebanon took Dormont, 35 to 21; Scottdale won over East Huntingron Township, 34 to 15; Norwin tripped Jeannette, 24 to 18; Georges Township downed South Union, 25 to 20, and Brownsville continued its fast stepping by beating Redstone, 27 to 14.

Waynesburg was defeated by Claysville, coached by Tom Baker, former Bethany College star, 37 to 29. Bentleyville downed Ellsworth, 31 to 14, and Canonsburg beat Cecil for the second time, 25 to 19.

In a non-league game, the W. P. I. D. passers upset the dope by beating Homestead, 25 to 24, in a nip and tuck struggle.

Among the junior high school teams, South defeated Knoxville, 18 to 8; Washington took Overbrook, 9 to 6; Liberty defeated Baxter, 20 to 16, Fifth tripped Schenley, 14 to 10; Latimer won over Prospect, 16 to 11; Braddock crushed Forest Hills, 40 to 5, and Monessen walloped Charleroi, 18 to 7.

The Pitt freshmen defeated Duquesne for the second time this season at Duquesne, 27 to 25.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE FLAMING GEYSER—Located in Flaming Geyser Park, a few miles from Auburn, Wash., is a peculiar phenomenon which consists of petroleum gas forcing its way through salt water at regular intervals, and burning vividly when ignited. Once a day the water in the hole bubbles and rises violently, apparently from the gas pressure within, and when a match is thrown into the pool flames burst forth and rise six to eight feet into the air. Then the water recedes and the flames die out. The exact source of the peculiar gas is not known.

TOMORROW: MORE ODDITIES.

LA BARBA BOWS TO WATSON

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—There are no barnacles on Seaman Watson, fistic pride of the King's navy.

"He can't fight much," the experts agreed, after viewing the now famous "trial by fistic jury" Watson was forced to undergo a few days after his arrival in this country.

But the pale, thin Briton fooled them all last night. Drawing rugged Fidel LaBarba as his first American rival, Watson recovered from a shaky start and belted the Californian into defeat in 12 rounds, while a crowd of 12,000 spectators roared approval.

There was no question as to the merits of the decision. Once the seaman got under way he was master of the situation, pounding La Barba fiercely at close quarters and forcing the one-time flyweight champion to hold frequently. La Barba dominated fighting in the first four rounds, flooring Watson twice for no counts, but from then on the Sailor held the edge.

Victory was doubly sweet for Watson. Not only did he prove his fighting qualifications beyond doubt, but he earned the right to battle Kid Chocolate, recognized in this state as world featherweight champion, in a title match here next month.

The battle hardly had started when Watson ran into one of La Barba's left hooks. The Briton bounced to the canvas, but was up without a count, and fighting back fiercely. Again in the fourth, a left hook sent him down, but he declined to stay there.

Through round after round, Watson belabored the Californian at close quarters, where he excelled by a wide margin, and the tiring LaBarba took a neat trouncing, holding whenever he got a chance in the later rounds.

Jerry Mazza, Brooklyn featherweight, knocked out by Al Roth, of New York, in the sixth round of their preliminary bout, was suffering from concussion of the brain at Polyclinic Hospital today.

GIANTS DICKER FOR VANCE

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—(INS.)—Secret negotiations involving Dazzy Vance, one-time king of National League pitchers, are being carried on by the New York Giants, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Brooklyn Dodgers, it was revealed today.

The Giants are hot on the trail of the big pitcher, the Cards are in a receptive mood and the Dodgers are eager to get rid of him.

At first the Dodgers blandly demanded Carl Hubbell in exchange, but the Giants countered with an offer of Freddy Fitzsimmons and the Dodgers now are inclined to take the fat boy whose knuckler has been trimming them for years and years.

Both the Giants and Dodgers are interested in Tex Carleton, of the Cardinals. It is understood the Cards are willing to part with the young righthander for Vance and a bundle of cash. When Bill Terry first approached them the cards mentioned $50,000. They may be more reasonable now, especially if the Giants turn over Fitzsimmons.

Thirteen members of the Giants were in the fold today with receipt of the signed contract of Ray, Starr, young right-hand pitcher.

Baseball Briefs

CLEVELAND.—Dick Porter, star outfielder, today became a member of the expanding group of Cleveland Indians who are dissatisfied with the salary figures in their 1933 contracts. Porter was reported as saying that he would refuse to sign unless he obtained a better offer.

COLUMBUS, O.—Outfielder Ray Blades, veteran of the St. Louis Cardinals, became the No. 1 possibility for manager of the Columbus baseball team in the American Association today following his purchase of the Columbus Club last night.

ST. LOUIS—Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, today declined to discuss the possibility that Mike Gonzales, veteran catcher released Wednesday by the St. Louis club, might be named manager of one of the Cardinals' "farm" clubs.

BROOKLYN—The Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday signed Joe Judge, first baseman for the Washington Senators for many years. Judge was a free agent.

SEATTLE, Wash.—Earl Averill, star center fielder of the Cleveland Indians, today was getting in condition for the 1933 race by steelhead fishing.

Hack Gets License To Serve as Referee

WHEELING, W. Va., Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Lewis (Hack) Wilson, Brooklyn outfielder, who once almost entered the squared ring as an opponent of Arthur (The Great) Shires, intends to actually get into a ring Monday night. But not as a fighter.

He was issued a boxing referee's license yesterday by Col. George Phillips, chairman of the West Virginia Athletic Commission, who said he understood Wilson will act as third man in a bout next Monday in his home town at Martinsburg.

GLEDHILL TOPS AUSSIE STAR

MELBOURNE, Australia, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Keith Gledhill today succeeded where Ellsworth Vines, Jr., failed as he defeated 16-year-old Vivian McGrath of Australia, in straight sets in the semi-finals of the Australian lawn tennis championships. The scores were 6-4, 6-1, 6-1.

Gledhill will meet Jack Crawford, Australia's No. 1, in the final.

After defeating McGrath, Gledhill paired with Vines to defeat R. O. Cummings and H. Hassert, 6-1, 6-3, 7-5, in the semi-final of doubles. They will meet Crawford and E. O. Moon in the finals. The Australians defeated the veteran American Davis Cup pair of John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison in the other semi-final, 10-8, 6-3, 6-4.

The defeat of Vines, American and Wimbledon champion, by young McGrath yesterday was a stunning upset.

REGATTA PLAN WINS EAST

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Along the eastern naval front the response was quick and in some instances distinctly favorable to the proposal for a national intercollegiate championship regatta over the famous Olympic rowing course at Long Beach, Cal., this June.

Cornell and Syracuse, in response to an Associated Press inquiry yesterday, both reacted favorably to the idea, which involves a proposition for Southern California interests to underwrite the regatta to the tune of $50,000 and furnish a Far Western substitute for the cancelled Poughkeepsie races this year.

Other rowing colleges, including Princeton, Pennsylvania and Columbia, refrained from taking any definite position on short notice, in the absence of more specific information about the details, but Henry Penn Burke, of Philadelphia, president of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, suggested the Penn Athletic Club eight would be willing to go, if invited.

At Cornell, where rowing enthusiasm has taken a rebound and insured a competitive program this spring despite the university's economy move, Head Coach Jim Wray said:

"I think it's a perfectly fine idea, if it can be arranged. It would be a good sporting event. We would like to go if we could get faculty permission."

By JESS CARVER

In 33 clashes over a period of 25 years, basketball teams of Pitt have been able to defeat the lads from old West (By Golly) Virginia no fewer than 21 times. As the rivals renew relations in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion tonight, it looks very much as though the Panthers would make it 22 for the series, five in a row and eight out of the last 10 against the Mountaineers and hang up their ninth victory in the 11 starts of the present campaign.

The foregoing might indicate that Pitt is favored to take the Mountaineers tonight, which is exactly as it was intended. What is more, the Pitt freshmen are picked to beat the West Virginia yearlings in the preliminary, but after the varsity encounter, Pitt's athletic supremacy for the evening is expected to wane as the Panther boxers take on the Mountaineer pugs in an Intercollegiate Conference match. When it comes to the fisticuffing, the visitors from Morgantown look like the boys to have the best on.

STUDAHAR DANGEROUS

The varsity encounter, by the way, will get under way tonight one-half an hour earlier than usual, at 7:45 o'clock. The freshmen teams will get going at 6:30. Keep this in mind and don't be coming in late . . . you might miss out on your seat.

Were it not for the fact that Joe Stydahar became eligible for varsity competition at West Virginia only this week, the chances of the visitors here tonight would appear even less rosy. The Mountaineers started off the season needing a center and as the campaign progressed, this need became more and more evident. Then Stydahar, a member of the Pitt freshmen football squad in 1931, turned eligible and broke into the game against West Virginia Wesleyan Wednesday evening. His presence in the lineup did not bring about a Mountaineer victory, for Wesleyan won the ball game, but the big fellow did count 24 points, which are a lot of points in any league, especially with things being as they are at present. There is nothing small about Mister Stydahar, even to the way in which he garners points.

With Stydahar more accustomed to his position tonight, the Mountaineers, under that most gentlemanly of coaches, Francis X. Stadsvold, hope to give the Panthers a real ball game, maybe even pressing them as close as did Notre Dame last week.

PITT LINEUP INTACT

Coach Carlson, of Pitt, plans to send his regular lineup into the fray at the gun. Skip Hughes and Capt. Don Smith, therefor, will cavort at the forwards, Claire Cribbs, who starred in the Wash-Jeff game Tuesday, will be back at center and Don McCamant, Russ Ochsenhirt and Charley Hughes at the guards.

If he employs the same starting lineup tonight that went to work against Wesleyan, Coach Stadsvold will have Capt. Leo Sortet and Slate at the forwards, Stydahar at center and Klug and Stewart at the guards. Ayersman and Gower may get the forward jobs, with Sortet moved back to a guard with Klug. You never can tell until you see 'em on the floor.

Al Grayber will referee the boxing bouts, which will be put on directly the basketballers have reached a decision. In a Pitt intra-mural championship bout, carded as an added attraction, Gene Stoughton and Arnold Greene will mix it up. The varsity program of bouts follows:

115 pounds—Barkalow, W. Va., vs. Pearle, Pitt.
125 pounds—Puglia, W. Va., vs. Conti, Pitt.
135 pounds—Neeley, W. Va., vs. Gianbatti, Pitt.
145 pounds—Hamilton, W. Va., vs. Speigel, Pitt.
155 pounds—Gallo, W. Va., vs. Schricker, Pitt.
165 pounds—Voorhees, W. Va., vs. Gongloff, Pitt.
175 pounds—Payne, W. Va., vs. Horowicz, Pitt.

TECH, DUKES BATTLE

There are two Intercollegiate Conference boxing affairs on for tonight, for while Pitt and West Virginia are swatting at one another, the Carnegie Tech varsity ringmen open their campaign by taking on the Dukes in the Tartan gym. The meet is the second of the season for the Dukes, who downed Wash-Jeff in their opener last week.

Freddie Moore, star of the Duquesne team and the Conference 145-pound champion, who scored a knockout over Haler Osborn, of Wash-Jeff, in his first bout, meets Lowry, of Tech, tonight. The program follows:

115-pound class—Vitula, Duquesne, vs. Comastine, Carnegie.
125-pound class—Atlas, Carnegie, vs. Gibbs, Duquesne.
135-pound class—Capt. Carr, Carnegie, vs. Ehrlich, Duquesne.
145-pound class—Capt. Moore, Duquesne, vs. Lowry, Carnegie.
155-pound class—Rumora, Duquesne, vs. Kulesz, Carnegie.
165-pound class—Hart, Carnegie, vs. Chappalla, Duquesne.
175-pound class—Rooney, Duquesne, vs. Croissant, Carnegie.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The crack Pittsburgh Golf Club quintet looms as overwhelming favorites to succeed P. A. A. in role of Class A champion of the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association Inter-Club League as 1932-1933 team competition terminates this afternoon.

The flying golfers, with nary a squad verdict against them for the season, boast four-match advantage over Keystone A. C., their next and only rival with even mathematical chance of heading them off—and nothing short of cataclysmic form reversal today can bring titular triumph to the Keystoners.

K. A. C. CHANCE SLIGHT

The wind-up program calls for the Golf Club crew to entertain the unseated premier, P. A. A., an outfit which the Reedmen trimmed by 4-1 count on the Winged Head courts prior to the holidays. Meanwhile Keystone journeys to Allegheny County Club for a tussle which should bring forth classic fray between Dave Gilmore, home southpaw, and Frank McClintock, ace of the K. A. C.

If P. G. C. can bag as many as two of the five tilts with P. A. A., the trophy goes to McCook Reed and company regardless of what may happen on Sewickley Heights.

Ben Pope, Keystone pro and boss of the Wood Streeters' racquet destinies, stated yesterday that Barney Wolfe, of Pittsburgh Golf Club, downed Herb Lytle, K. A. C. luminary, in private play-off of a joust originally billed for last Saturday. The 2-2 deadlock officially reported was thus broken and the nod given P. G. C. Two Class B play-off encounters involving the Keystoners with Edgeworth were split, Craig defeating Bill Gordon for a Keystone success and Quizzer Woods accounting for Jim Fulton in behalf of Edgeworth.

Y TEAMS TIED

Downtown Y. M. C. A., tied with Y. M. H. A. for leadership of the Class A race in the new City Handball circuit, invades the Bellefield area this afternoon for struggle with an Alman array that will be very tough in its own territory with first position at stake.

As the Y foes tangle, P. A. A., lurking in third place, jaunts to Keystone in quest of repeat victory that might readily advance the Red and Gray to the runner-up notch. In the B division, Downtown Y. M. C. A. will endeavor to obviate a Y. M. H. A. runaway by stopping the Bellefielders in the Downtown enclosures. P. A. A. figures to gain a spot of ground by playing host to the lowly Keystoners.

HALL, SHIELDS NET FINALISTS

MONTREAL, Quebec, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Two players from below the border, J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., and Frank Shields, of New York, have smashed their way into the final round of the Canadian indoor tennis championships and will battle today for the title the United States has held continuously for six years.

Hall, the defending title-holder, was extended to the utmost before he could eliminate the little Canadian Davis Cup player, Marcel Rainville, of Montreal, in the semi-finals yesterday, 4-6, 8-6, 13-11, 6-2. Shields, on the other hand, had no troubles with Charles W. Leslie, of Montreal, and won in straight sets, 6-2, 6-1, 6-1.

LOTT REACHES FINAL

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 28.—(AP.)—George Lott, Jr., of Chicago, former U. S. Davis Cup star, has reached the final round of the annual all-South tennis championship tournament, and his opponent in the title round will be decided today.

Lott advanced to the finals yesterday, defeating the eastern singles champion, Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., in a semi-final match, 6-4, 7-5, 6-3.

Bryan Grant, Jr., of Atlanta, and Clifford Sutter, of New Orleans, battling desperately for the right to oppose Lott for the title, were tied at two sets each, and Grant was leading, 4-5, in the fifth and deciding set when darkness settled over the Miami Biltmore courts. The match will be concluded today.

Phelan To Stay At Washington

SEATTLE, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Jimmy Phelan, University of Washington football coach, today telephoned from Chicago to University officials, accepting a contract to remain at Washington for the next three years.

Marshall Passers Lose to Bobcats

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., Jan. 28.—Marshall College's second stop of its three-game basketball invasion of West Virginia was a disastrous one.

The Thundering Herd met West Virginia Wesleyan here last night and after a see-saw struggle, during which the lead changed hands several times, the Bobcats won, 36 to 32.

WHEELING, W. Va., Jan. 28.—(AP.)—After being held to one-point margin, 10-9, in first quarter, the West Liberty Teachers quintet went on scoring rampage last night and smothered John Carroll of Cleveland, 50-24.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 28. (AP.)—Glenville State had an easy time with the Charleston Business College five last night, winning 62 to 44. The Pioneers held a 35-15 lead at the half and ran in numerous substitutes.

HEAVY SOCCER CARD TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

The heaviest Saturday soccer card of the season is on tap for this afternoon, five West Penn cup ties being scheduled.

It would be hard to select the best game, for all promise to be hectic affairs. At Swissvale, the defending champions, the Zoneys, of Castle Shannon, will meet Union Switch, and fans who saw the three-game series for the title last season will be out for today's clash.

At Mt. Lebanon, the Firemen will clash with Clan Douglas. The Firemen are good cup fighters, and should Joe Luxbacker be able to put a representative team on the field, the Clansmen will have a tough afternoon.

Sturgeon goes to Ambridge in a game that finds a good Junior outfit clashing with a Senior team. At Leslie Park, the Curry team, fresh from its victory over the Cleveland Shamrocks, probably will attract a large crowd when its swings into action against Lawrenceville, ruler of the Central League.

Sygan and Beadling will tangle at Beadling in a Junior cup affair.

DUKES DEFEAT TARTANS IN CITY SERIES

Duquesne University's varsity basketball team is exactly in the same spot today it was a year ago as concerns the city college floor championship. The Dukes have two victories to their cred it for two tries against Pitt and Tech.

The Red and Blue put down Carnegie last night before a remarkably fine turnout of the faithful, considering the state of the weather, 37 to 25. The victors hopped off to a flying start to pile up an early lead and never were behind.

TECH CUTS LEAD

Carnegie did manage to pull up to within five points of the fast-stepping Dukes at the half, and matched the Buffites in the matter of field goals for the first 20 minutes of action, but in the second half, the Daviesmen went to work and counted eight points before the Techs could score, finally working the score to 26 to 13. Here Carnegie, led by Lou Jagnow, who evaded Marty Reiter for three field goals, braced and held the champions to a 12-point margin.

Paul Birch, old No. 13 himself, led Duquesne's first half drive with eight points, scored on two field goals and twice as many fouls. Bob Smith dumped three buckets and a foul for seven of Tech's 10 markers.

Just to show you the extreme to which Birch, who sports No. 13 on his jersey, carries his razzing of superstition, he stepped up to the foul line in the first half with a trifle over 13 minutes to play gone to try for the thirteenth point and derned if he didn't make it. Wotta man.

DUKES INCREASE EDGE

In the second half, with Carnegie's defenses badly disorganized, Art Feldman and Dudey Moore, who still looks like as good a player as there is in the district, each contributed three field goals to the Red and Blue cause, with Feldman adding a brace of fouls, thus taking the lead in the scoring. Birch came through with three free throws to win high individual scoring honors for the night with a total of 11 points. Smith led for Carnegie with nine.

The Tartans missed fire on 10 out of 18 free throws, very, very bad, while the Dukes were good on 15 out of 19. The lineup:

DUKES.	G.	F.	Pts.	TECH.	G.	F.	Pts.
Birch, f.	2	7	11	Smith, f.	3	3	9

PLEBES BEATEN

In a nip and very much tick preliminary, the Duquesne freshmen defeated the Tartan Plebes, 17 to 16. The lineup:

KING DEFEATS RANDALL

TIGER JOE RANDALL JACK KING

Welterweights battling in main bout at Arena last night. King was the winner after a slow start, his accurate countering to the body and head putting him in front. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

KING WINNER OVER TIGER AT ARENA

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

At last they're running off boxing shows in this town the way they should be run off. Jim McGirr started it with his opening show in the Moose Temple last Wednesday night, and the plan clicked so well that the Boxing Commission has ordered the other promoters to follow suit. The idea is to start on time and run right through without any delays between bouts.

At the Arena, on the North Side, last night, the main bout was in the ring before 9:45 o'clock and the show was over at 10:20, and the fans had a chance to arrive home early and get some sleep. In the past, it has been nothing unusual for the shows to run beyond 11 o'clock, with no more rounds than were fought last night.

BILL ULRICH SCORES FOR PERRY HIGH FIVE

Perry High School defeated Oliver on the latter's floor yesterday to wind up the first half of the season in Section II of the City League with an unbeaten record. Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture shows a bit of the action in the basketball game.

JACK EASY WINNER

Tiger Joe Randall, Negro welterweight, of Elizabeth, bowed to Jack King, of Little Rock, Ark., in the 10-round windup of the Arena show, an interesting bout, with King slow to warm up to his work, but, once under way, winning easily, outboxing his man and countering effectively to the body and head with solid blows that forced Randall to cover. Randall did the forcing at the start and hurt King with a right to the head near the end of the first round. He won the first two rounds and held his own in the next two, but from then on it was all King.

Eddie Bojack, of Cleveland, who originally was matched with Randall in the main bout, was floored for nine in the second round and counted out in the third in his scheduled eight-round semi-final with Jacquette Elverillo, Homewood Negro welterweight, who showed class and a punch in winning.

TUG PHILLIPS COPS

Tug Phillips, of Charleroi, returning to action after a layoff, won the referee's decision over Hal Finney, Hill Negro welterweight, in the six-round second bout. Tug's ruggedness and harder punching decided the issue.

Billy Criggan, of Homestead, lost to Dominick Mancini, of Blairsville, in the opener.

The bad weather kept away many of the regular fans. It was announced Midget Wolgast, the world flyweight champion, will meet Jackie Wilson, speedy bantamweight, of Homewood, in the Arena's main event next Friday night.

Between Rounds

The card has been completed for Monday night's Johnny Datto-Barney Ross show at Motor Square Garden with the signing of Johnny Durso to box Eddie Zivic in the second bout.

More than 100 boxers will compete in the Allegheny Mountain Association, A. A. U., junior championship tournament at the Keystone A. C., beginning next Thursday night and continuing through four nights. Entries close Monday night.

Willie Davies boxes Georgie Annarino in a 10-round bout at Zanesville, O., Monday night.

Duquesne-Geneva Floor Games Shifted

Because they meet Westminster at Beaver Falls next Saturday night, the scene of the Dukes' basketball game with Geneva next Wednesday night will be the Duquesne gym, rather than the Beaver Falls court, as originally scheduled. It was not deemed advisable to have the Dukes appear at Beaver Falls twice within a span of four days.

The Duquesne-Geneva game scheduled here February 7 will be played at Beaver Falls.

VIC LOTTI WINS

WORCESTER, Mass., Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Vic Lotti, of Marlboro, shaded Frankie Petrolle, of Schenectady, N. Y., in a 10-round bout here last night. There were no knockdowns. Lotti weighed 140½, and Petrolle 145.

COAST CUEISTS SHOW WAY IN CUE PLAY

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—The world three cushion billiard championship tournament is beginning to look more and more like a dual between the members of the California delegation—Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, and J. N. Bozeman, Jr., of Vallejo.

Cochran today led with five victories and one defeat, but Bozeman, idle yesterday, will meet Clarence Jackson, of Detroit, tonight, and on form, should be right back in a tie as the final week of the tournament opens tomorrow.

COCHRAN TAKES LEAD

The San Francisco balkline master, who is making his first try for the angle style championship, last night broke out of a tie with Bozeman by trimming Tiff Denton, of Kansas City, 50 to 30, in 41 innings. After a slow start, he got organized and wasted no time in outdistancing the Kansas City veteran. His high run was a useful nine, while Denton had a six.

Allen Hall, of Chicago, who yesterday won his first victory, was paired with Otto Reiselt, of Philadelphia, today. Arthur Thurnblad, the third Chicagoan, was matched with Frank Scoville, of Buffalo, N. Y., in the second afternoon test.

After losing three matches by one point, Hall yesterday defeated Scoville, 50 to 28, in a 44-inning match, running six to the loser's five. The match was close for 21 innings, but Hall found himself and won easily.

CHAMPION WINS

Augie Kieckhefer, of Chicago the defending titleholder, improved his chances of repeating by defeating Thurnblad, 50 to 42, in 49 innings. The victory put the southpaw in a tie with Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo., for third place at four victories and one defeat, with both Cochran and Bozeman yet to be played. The standing of the players:

CALVIN COOLIDGE'S OWN LIFE STORY

Thrift and Industry Advised by Coolidge To Combat Bad Times

CHAPTER XIII.

At a state convention in South Dakota held very early to express a preference for national candidates I had been declared their choice for Vice President. Some people in Oregon desired to accord me a like honor, As I did not wish my name to appear in any contest and did not care to be Vice President I declined to be considered for that office. In my native state of Vermont it was proposed to enter my name in the primary as candidate for President, which I could not permit. Nevertheless it was written on the ballot by many of the voters at the polls.

When the Republican national convention met at Chicago, Senator Lodge, who was elected its chairman, had indicated that he did not wish to present my name, so it was arranged that Speaker Gillett should make the nominating speech. Massachusetts had 35 delegates. On the first ballot I received 28 of their votes and six others from scattering states, making my total 34. As the balloting proceeded a considerable number of the Massachusetts delegates, feeling I had no chance, voted for other candidates, but a majority remained with me until the final ballot when all but one went elsewhere, and Senator Warren G. Harding was nominated. My friends in the convention did all they could for me, and several states were at times ready to come to me if the entire Massachusetts delegation would lead the way, but some of them refused to vote for me, so the support of other states could not be secured.

Named Vice President

While I do not think it was so intended I have always been of the opinion that this turned out to be much the best for me. I had no national experience. What I have ever been able to do has been the result of first learning how to do it. I am not gifted with intuition. I need not only hard work but experience to be ready to solve problems. The Presidents who have gone to Washington without first having held some national office have been at great disadvantage. It takes them a long time to become acquainted with the federal officeholders and the federal government. Meanwhile they have had difficulty in dealing with the situation.

The convention of 1920 was largely under the domination of a coterie of United States Senators. They maneuvered it into adopting a platform and nominating a President in ways that were not satisfactory to a majority of the delegates. When the same forces undertook for a third time to dictate the action of the convention in naming a Vice President, the delegates broke away from them and literally stampeded to me.

Massachusetts did not present my name, because my friends knew I did not wish to be Vice President, but Judge Wallace McCamant, of Oregon, placed me in nomination and was quickly seconded by North Dakota and some other states. I received about three-quarters of all the votes cast. When this honor came to me I was pleased to accept, and it was especially agreeable to be associated with Senator Harding, whom I knew well and liked.

League of Nations

When our campaign opened, the situation was complex. Many Republicans did not like the somewhat uncertain tone of the platform concerning the League of Nations. Though it was generally conceded that the bitter-enders had dictated the platform there were some who felt it was not explicit enough in denouncing the league with all its works and everything foreign, and a much larger body of Republicans were much disappointed that it did not declare in favor of ratifying the treaty with reservations.

The Massachusetts Republican State Convention in the fall of 1919 had adopted a plank favoring immediate ratification with suitable reservations which would safeguard American interests. While later the treaty had been rejected by the Senate it was still necessary to make a formal agreement of peace with the Central Powers, and for that purpose some treaty would be necessary. Many Republicans favored our entry into the league as a method of closing up the war period and helping stabilize world conditions. Senator Crane had taken that position in Massachusetts and repeated it again at Chicago.

Since that time the situation has changed. The war period has closed and a separate treaty has been made and ratified. The more I have seen of the conduct of our foreign relations the more I am convinced that we are better off out of the league. Our government is not organized in a way that would enable us adequately to deal with it. Nominally our foreign affairs are in the hands of the President. Actually the Senate is always attempting to interfere, too often in a partisan way and many times in opposition to the President. Our country is not racially homogeneous. While the several nationalities represented here are loyal to the United States, yet when differences arise between European countries, each group is naturally in sympathy with the nation of its origin. Our actions in the league would constantly be embarrassed by this situation at home. The votes of our delegates there would all the time disturb our domestic tranquility here. We have come to realize this situation very completely now, but in 1920 it was not so clear.

Greeted by Friends

At that time we were close to the war. Our sympathies were very much with our allies and a great body of sentiment in our country, which may be called the missionary spirit, was strongly in favor of helping Europe. To them the league meant an instrumnt for that end. That was a praiseworthy spirit and had to be reckoned with in dealing with the people in a political campaign. This sentiment was very marked in the East where it had a strong hold on a very substantial element of the Republican party.

While I was taking a short vacation in Vermont several thousand people came to my father's home to greet me. I spent most of my time, however, in preparing my speech of acceptance. The notification ceremonies were held on a pleasant afternoon in midsummer at Northampton in Allen Field, which was part of the college grounds, and its former president, the venerable Dr. L. Clark Seelye, presided. The chairman of the notification committee was Gov. Morrow, of Kentucky. A great throng representing many different states was in attendance to hear my address. I was careful to reassure those who feared we were not proposing to continue our co-operation with Europe in attempting to solve the war problems in a way that would provide for a permanent peace of the world.

Not being the head of the ticket, of course, it was not my place to raise issues or create policies, but I had the privilege of discussing those already declared in the platform or stated in the addresses of Senator Harding. This I undertook to do in a speech I made at Portland, Me., where I again pointed out the wish of our party to have our country associated with other countries in advancing human welfare. Later in the campaign I reiterated this position at New York.

Borne Out by Events

This was not intended as a subterfuge to win votes, but as a candid statement of party principles. It was later to be put into practical effect by President Harding, in the important treaty dealing with our international relation in the Pacific Ocean, in the agreement for the limitation of naval armaments, in the proposal to enter the World Court, and finally by me in the World Peace Treaty. All that I said and more in justification of support of the Republican ticket by those interested in promoting peace, without committing our country to interfere where we had little interest, has been abundantly borne out by the events.

Shortly before election I made a tour of eight days, going from Philadelphia by special train west to Tennessee and Kentucky and south as far as North Carolina. We had a most encouraging reception on this trip, speaking out-of-doors, mostly from the rear platform during the day, with an indoor meeting at night. During the campaign I spoke in about a dozen states.

The country was already feeling acutely the results of deflation. Business was depressed. For months following the armistice we had persisted in a course of much extravagance and reckless buying. Wages had been paid that were not earned. The whole country, from the national government down, had been living on borrowed money. Pay day had come, and it was found our capital had been much impaired. In an address at Philadelphia I contended that the only sure method of relieving this distress was for the country to follow the advice of Benjamin Franklin and begin to work and save. Our productive capacity is sufficient to maintain us all in a state of prosperity if we give sufficient attention to thrift and industry. Within a year the country had adopted that course, which has brought an era of great plenty.

When the election came it appeared that we had held practically the entire Republican vote and had gained enormously from all those groups who have been in this country so short a time that they still retain a marked race consciousness. Many of them had left Europe to escape from the prevailing conditions there. While they were loyal to the United States they did not wish to become involved in any old world disputes, were greatly relieved that the war was finished, and generally opposed to the League of Nations. Such a combination gave us an overwhelming victory.

Policies Discussed

After election it was necessary for me to attend a good many celebrations. My home town of Northampton had a large mass meeting at which several speeches were made. In Boston a series of dinners and lunches were given in my honor. Shortly before Christmas Mrs. Coolidge and I paid a brief visit to Mr. and Mrs. Harding at their home in Marion, O. They received us in the most gracious manner. It was no secret to us why their friends had so much affection for them.

We discussed at length the plans for his administration. The members of his cabinet were considered and he renewed the invitation to me, already publicly expressed, to sit with them. The policies he wished to adopt for restoring the prosperity of the country by reducing taxes and revising the tariff were referred to more casually. He was sincerely devoted to the public welfare and desirous of improving the condition of the people.

When at last another Governor was inaugurated to take my place and the guns on Boston Common were giving him their first salute, Mrs. Coolidge and I were leaving for home from the North Station on the afternoon train which I had used so much before I was Governor. It had only day coaches and no parlor car, but we were accustomed to travel that way and only anxious to go home. For nine years I had been in public life in Boston.

During the winter I made an address before the Vermont Historical Society at Montpelier and spoke later at the Town Hall in New York for a group of ladies who were restoring the birthplace of Theodore Roosevelt.

Welcomed in Washington

After a brief stay at Northampton, Mrs. Coolidge and I went to Atlanta, where I spoke before the Southern Tariff Association. A great deal of hospitality was lavished upon us by the state officials and the people in the city. In a few days we went to Asheville, N. C., where we remained about two weeks. The Grove Park Inn entertained us with everything that could be wished, and the region was delightful.

When the Massachusetts electors met, Judge Henry P. Field, of the firm where I read law, who had moved my admission to the bar, now had the experience of nominating me for Vice President. Twenty-four years had intervened between these two services which he performed for me.

The time soon came for us to go to Washington. A large crowd of our friends was at the station to bid us goodbye, although the hour was very early. We went a few days before March 4 in order to have a little time to get settled. The Vice President and Mrs. Marshall met us and gave us every attention and courtesy. When Mr. and Mrs. Harding arrived, we went to the station to meet them and they took us back with them to the New Willard—where we too were staying—in the White House car President Wilson sent for them.

About 10:30 the next morning a committee of the Congress came to escort us to the White House where the President and Mrs. Wilson joined us and we went to the Capitol. Soon President Wilson sent for me and said his health was such it would not be wise for him to remain for the inauguration and bade me goodbye. I never saw him again except at a distance, but he sent me a most sympathetic letter when I became President. Such was the passing of a great world figure.

As I had already taken a leading part in seven inaugurations and witnessed four others in Massachusetts, the experience was not new to me, but I was struck by the lack of order and formality that prevailed. A part of the ceremony takes place in the Senate Chamber and a part on the east portico, which destroys all semblance of unity and continuity. I was sworn in before the Senate and made a very brief address dwelling on the great value of a deliberative body as a safeguard of our liberties.

Oath Administered

It was a clear but crisp spring day out-of-doors where the oath was administered to the President by Chief Justice White. The inaugural address was able and well received. President Harding had an impressive delivery, which never failed to interest and hold his audience. I was to hear him many times in the next two years, but whether on formal occasions or in the freedom of Gridiron dinners, his charm and effectiveness never failed.

When the inauguration was over I realized that the same thing for which I had worked in Massachusetts had been accomplished in the nation. The radicalism which had tinged our whole political and economic life from soon after 1900 to the World War period was passed. There were still echoes of it, and some of its votaries remained, but its power was gone. The country had little interest in mere destructive criticism. It wanted the progress that alone comes from constructive policies.

It had been our intention to take a house in Washington, but we found none to our liking. They were too small or too large. It was necessary for me to live within my income, which was little more than my salary and was charged with the cost of sending my boys to school. We therefore took two bedrooms with a dining room, and large reception room at the New Willard where we had every convenience.

It is difficult to conceive a person finding himself in a situation which calls on him to maintain a position he cannot pay for. Any other course for me would have been cut short by the barnyard philosophy of my father, who would have contemptuously referred to such action as the senseless imitation of a fowl which was attempting to light higher than it could roost. There is no dignity quite so impressive, and no independence quite so important, as living within your means. In our country a small income is usually less embarrassing than the possession of a large one.

But my experience has convinced me that an official residence with suitable maintenance should be provided for the Vice President. Under the present system he is not lacking in dignity but he has no fixed position. The great office should have a settled and permanent habitation and a place, irrespective of the financial ability of its temporary occupant. While I was glad to be relieved of the responsibility of a public establishment, nevertheless, it is a duty the second officer of the nation should assume. It would be much more in harmony with our theory of equality if each Vice President held the same position in the Capital City.

Social Affairs

Very much is said and written concerning the amount of dining out that the Vice President does. As the President is not available for social dinners of course the next officer in rank is much sought after for such occasions. But like everything else that is sent out of Washington for public consumption the reports are exaggerated. Probably the average of these dinners during the season does not exceed three a week, and as the Senate is in session after 12 o'clock each week day, there is no opportunity for lunches or teas.

When we first went to Washington Mrs. Coolidge and I quite enjoyed the social dinners. As we were always the ranking guests we had the privilege of arriving last and leaving first, so that we were usually home by 10 o'clock. It will be seen that this was far from burdensome. We found it a most enjoyable opportunity for getting acquainted and could scarcely comprehend how anyone who had the privilege of sitting at a table surrounded by representatives of the cabinet, the Congress, the Diplomatic Corps and the Army and Navy would not find it interesting.

Presiding over the Senate was fascinating to me. That branch of the Congress has its own methods and traditions which may strike the outsider as peculiar, but more familiarity with them would disclose that they are only what long experience has demonstrated to be the best methods of conducting its business. It may seem that debate is endless, but there is scarcely a time when it is not informing, and, after all, the power to compel due consideration is the distinguishing mark of a deliberative body. If the Senate is anything it is a great deliberative body and if it is to remain a safeguard of liberty it must remain a deliberative body. I was entertained and instructed by the debates. However it may appear in the country, no one can become familiar with the inside workings of the Senate without gaining a great respect for it. The country is safe in its hands.

Senate Rules

At first I intended to become a student of the Senate rules and I did learn much about them, but I soon found that the Senate had but one fixed rule, subject to exceptions of course, which was to the effect that the Senate would do anything it wanted to do. When I had learned that, I did not waste much time on the other rules, because they were so seldom applied. The assistant to the Secretary of the Senate could be relied on to keep me informed on other parliamentary questions. But the president of the Senate can and does exercise a good deal of influence over its deliberations. The Constitution gives him the power to preside, which is the power to recognize whom he will. That often means that he decides what business is to be taken up and who is to have the floor for debate at any specific time.

Nor is the impression that it is a dilatory body never arriving at decisions correct. In addition to acting on the thousands of nominations, and the numerous treaties, it passes much more legislation than the House. But it is true that unanimous consent is often required to close debate, and because of the great power each Senator is therefore permitted to exercise—which is often a veto power, making one Senator a majority of the 96 Senators—great care should be exercised by the states in their choice of Senators. Nothing is more dangerous to good government than great power in improper hands. If the Senate has any weakness it is because the people have sent to that body men lacking the necessary ability and character to perform the proper functions. But this is not the fault of the Senate. It cannot choose its own members, but has to work with what is sent to it. The fault lies back in the citizenship of the states. If the Senate does not function properly the blame is chiefly on them.

Valuable Experience

If the Vice President is a man of discretion and character, so that he can be relied upon to act as a subordinate in such position, he should be invited to sit with the cabinet, although some of the Senators, wishing to be the only advisers of the President, do not look on that proposal with favor. He may not help much in its deliberations, and only on rare occasions would he be a useful contact with the Congress, although his advice on the sentiment of the Senate is of much value, but he should be in the cabinet because he might become President and ought to be informed on the policies of the administration. He will not learn all of them. Much went on in the departments under President Harding, as it did under me, of which the cabinet had no knowledge. But he will hear much and learn how to find out more if it ever becomes necessary. My experience in the cabinet was of supreme value to me when I became President.

SEWING CIRCLE TO AID NEEDY

Father Cox has city-wide plans for the organization of a sewing circle, with branches in each community, to repair old clothes and make new ones for the hundreds of destitute who look to him for assistance. The nucleus of this organization has already been formed at Old St. Patrick's Church, and will be directed by Mrs. George Mason, Sr., and Mrs. Elizabeth Klenn.

Women interested in cooperating are invited to notify the welfare department at Old St. Patrick's—phone Grant 4390. A recent appeal in the Sun-Telegraph brought donations of more than 20 sewing machines. Now the volunteer workers desire donations of used clothing and piece goods which can be put into shape for immediate use.

If you have anything for this purpose it will be appreciated if sent to Father Cox or notify his office at Old St. Patrick's and his truck will call. The need for clothing is particularly urgent. Shoes are also greatly needed. These can be repaired by the volunteer workers at Shantytown.

The Father Cox-Sun-Telegraph subscription drive is still on and meeting with gratifying response. Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page brings a liberal cash commission to the Father Cox unemployment relief fund. A liberal check on this account was sent to Father Cox yesterday by the Sun-Telegraph.

NEW CAR YEAR ANTICIPATED

Motordom's array of its 1933 achievements will move tonight from the annual Pittsburgh Auto Show in the Hotel William Penn to the individual dealer's show rooms anticipating a revival in new car buying during the year.

Sales reports during the show, which closes its doors at 11:30 o'clock tonight in the Chatterbox and Exhibit Hall, revealed buyers' interest. Features of the display, besides the engineering advancement for motoring comfort and beauty of design, are found in the exhibits of accessory parts, radios and electric refrigerators, which is open to the public. The smallest radio station, WEE, draws the visitors' interest as it broadcasts on 4-100 watt.

Fink had conducted an advertising agency here for 40 years and had offices at 323 Fourth avenue.

Relief Squabble Is Like Fighting In A Lifeboat

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

To quibble over methods of relief at this stage is like fighting in a life boat.

That's what they're doing down in the old government wrangle reservation in the Biscuit of Columbia.

They're cheating the public of visible means of support by pulling straws that drowning people should be clutching at.

We hope no more men of the hour are elected to Congress. The profession is overcrowded now.

Most of the Legislators are on their way out. But to show their patriotism they are keeping us sick until the doctor arrives.

Well, it takes one of everything to make a world. In the case of Senators every state has two.

There must be good men down there. But when you start to separate the chaff from the wheat you get most of it in your hair.

ASK CONTINUED SCHOOL AID

School superintendents of Southwestern Pennsylvania have urged maintenance of state appropriations for schools, with no reductions, except to the extent that money to meet obligations is lacking. In such cases it was urged that the reduction be proportionate for all school districts.

This action confirms a resolution approved recently by the Superintendents of Allegheny County.

The Southwestern Pennsylvania group, meeting in the Administration Building, Oakland, also approved placing vocational training on the same basis with other forms of education in reducing state appropriations. Superintendents declared many pupils are required to earn their living with their hands, and must be taught manual work.

Ben G. Graham, Superintendent of Pittsburgh Schools, in speaking of demands for economy in school administration, said the schools will stand or fall on the service they render, continuing:

"I think it is incumbent upon us to reduce our expenditures to the lowest dollar, and, if possible, maintain the same amount of service."

R. K. O. TO SEEK RENTAL CUTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Revision of rentals and other fixed charges will be sought, officials indicated today, for the Radio - Keith - Orpheum Corporation, amusement company, which was placed in equity receivership by a Federal judge yesterday. Assets of the corporation were placed at about $133,000,000.

The Orpheum Circuit, Inc., a $23,000,000 operating company with theaters in 27 cities, entered a voluntary bankruptcy. This concern is controlled by Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation, which in turn is controlled by RKO.

M. H. Aylesworth, president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, said RKO directors concluded that to go on "without a substantial overhauling of the burdensome rental and fixed charges requirements of certain of the company's theater-owning subsidiaries and extensions of presently maturing debts of the company" would serve only to diminish assets further.

WIFE LEFT HIM, DRUGGIST SAYS

His wife criticised him because he was earning less than some of their friends, Lee Bryan, druggist, 3018 West Liberty avenue, testified in his divorce suit against Mrs. Alberta F. Bryan, who, he says, deserted him. Bryan, who was married in 1921, said he went home one night and found his wife gone. Later, he said, she moved out most of the furnishings.

Mrs. Mary M. Davis, 2433 Pioneer avenue, was granted a divorce from William C. Davis. She charged he drank and associated with other women. They were married in Cumberland, Md., June 22, 1925, when Mrs. Davis was 19.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Jan 28.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Saw today the first picture of the two men who manufactured technocracy. My faith in the thing, which had started at nothing, and grown less by leaps and bounds, took another nose dive. History will record as follows: "Early in 1933 America, sorely pressed economically, and their sense of humor lost in a mad whirl of grappling at anything offering relief, took two events seriously, a thing called technocracy, and a thing called a lame duck Congress. Both tried to save the country by a confusion of words, words, words. With not an idea in a carload. Both of these afflictions passed out simultaneously."

Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

MARY FAITH

Story of a Girl With Husband Who Wouldn't Grow Up

By BEATRICE BURTON

Mary Faith Hurries to Kim When She Learns He Is Seriously Ill

CHAPTER XLIII.

"I do love this kind of day, don't you? It seems so absolutely clean, doesn't it? Cleaner even than summer days when the sun comes out after a hard rain," Mary Faith said to Nesbit.

"Do you remember that I asked you to marry me that night?"

"Of course I do." Her lips had stiffened suddenly so that she could hardly speak and she could feel a flush going over her face.

"It was a long time ago, wasn't it, Mary Faith?" One of his hands slid along the window sill and covered one of hers.

"Three years, you said." She drew her hand from under his and began to back away from the window. She wished, just as she wished it three years before, that Mark Nesbit would stay in his lofty place as president of the Nesbit Mercantile Company and forget that she was anything but his secretary. She thought that he had forgotten it. For seven months he had been so business-like, so matter-of-fact with her at all times that sometimes she wondered if he had ever been really in love with her.

"Do you remember what I told you that night three years ago?" he was asking her now in a quiet heavy voice. She had sunk down on her chair behind her desk, and he was leaning over her.

STILL WANTS HER

She shook her head. All she remembered clearly of their conversation that night was that he had asked her to marry him and she had refused him. And through her confusion she reflected that if it were Kim asking her that question she could have told him every word he had said. She never forgot a syllable of Kim's.

"No, I don't remember, Mr. Nesbit. It's so long ago, isn't it?" She threw out her hands, that were usually so capable and sure, in a helpless, uncertain little movement.

"Well, I told you I'd probably feel about you all the rest of my life as I felt then," he said, "and I do. I knew it all the time you were away from this place—and, as soon as I heard from Miss Bartlett that you'd left your husband, I made up my mind to let you know just how things were with me." He spoke in that same stilted, heavy way, as if he had thought out what he wanted to say and was trying to remember just how he had planned to say it.

"If you hadn't come down here to work, I had made up my mind to find you and tell you all this. Not just at first, of course. I thought I'd wait for a few months—and those few months have passed. When you are free, I'm going to ask you again if you'll marry me."

UNPLEASANT SITUATION

He stopped and seemed to be waiting for her to make some kind of an answer. But Mary Faith only stared at him, her eyes wide and dark in her face that had gone dead white.

"And I think I ought to add," he went on, "that I'd be glad to adopt your boy and help you bring him up." He had thought of everything, evidently.

"I should never have let this happen," said Mary Faith to herself. "I should have seen it coming—and gone away long ago."

She should never have gone back to Nesbit's at all. She saw that now . . . Well, she'd have to go as soon as she could. It would be impossible to face Mark Nesbit after this afternoon. That was certain. It was hard enough to face him now.

She stood up to do it, her blue eyes level with his dark ones.

"If I'd dreamed that you were still thinking about me like this, Mr. Nesbit, I'd never have come back here. But it all seemed so business-like and ordinary at the time. Jean Bartlett was leaving and you needed someone to take her place—and I needed the place and the salary so badly—Did you think I was getting a divorce?"

She stopped abruptly as the telephone on her desk rang.

"Just a second, Mr. Nesbit," she said and lifted the receiver to her ear. "Mr. Nesbit's secretary speaking."

"Mary Faith? This you?" It was Kim's mother's voice, and at the sound of it Mary Faith started violently. She had not heard from her in several months.

"Yes, Mother Farrell." She forgot, in her surprise, that Kim's mother was no longer Mother Farrell, but "Mrs. Thatcher," as she called herself.

"Doctor and I wondered whether yo could stop in here when you leave your office tonight," she was saying. "We wanted to talk to you about Kimberley. He's here with us. He's been very ill, you know."

"No, I didn't know it." Mary Faith sat down in her chair. "What's been wrong with him?"

"Pneumonia."

HELP WANTED

Pneumonia! And they had never let her know!

"He's much better now, of course," the smooth soft voice at the other end of the wire ran on, and Mary Faith seemed to be listening to it with every fiber of her body. "Much better. And Doctor and I don't like to bother you at this time. But certain things have come up in the last day or two, and we feel that we can't settle them without your help."

Oh, what did the woman mean? Why didn't she say plainly and clearly what was wrong instead of talking about certain things that had come up . . . Mary Faith couldn't imagine what those certain things could be.

"I'll be right out," she said and hung up the receiver for a second. Then she took it down again and began to rattle the hook up and down to attract Miss Gilday's attention in the outer office.

"Will you please call a taxi for me right away, Miss Kelly?" she asked when Miss Kelly answered her.

Then she looked up at Mark Nesbit once more.

"My husband has been sick—terribly sick—with pneumonia," she said to him in a voice that was a wailing cry. "And they've never let me know—his people! Not until just now."

"I'm going to ask you again to marry me," said Nesbit.

She began to put the papers and pencils on her desk into a drawer and to pull the dust cover over her typewriter, while Mark Nesbit stood and watched her, his hands stuck in his pockets and his lips pursed up as if he were trying to whistle.

"I'm going out to him. Do you mind?" she asked, slamming the drawer and turning the key in its lock.

"Of course not. I'll go downstairs with you and wait until the cab comes," Mark Nesbit said quietly. He held the door open while she took down her wraps from the coat-tree in the corner and put them on.

The people in the outer office looked up curiously as the two of them came out of the little room and started down the stairs that led to the first floor.

Mary Faith barely saw them. No one truly existed for her at that moment but Kim. Her thoughts flew ahead of her to Dr. Thatcher's tall old-fashioned house in Bleeker street, where Kim lay ill.

"I could have driven you out in my car," she heard Mark Nesbit say to her, but it was a minute or two before his words carried any message to her brain.

"The taxi's all right," she said then, and as she spoke she saw it drive up before the building and heard the scream of its brakes as the driver jammed them on. "But thanks—you're very good."

At the door of the taxicab she spoke to him again. "You don't know how sorry I am about—all this, Mr. Nesbit. I've told you before that you're the kindest person I've ever known. Only, you see——"

"I see, I see, Mary Faith," he said to her and helped her into the cab. Through the frosty glass of the window she saw him smile and nod his head as the car rolled past him. And when it turned the corner a minute later he was still standing on the snowy curb, looking after it.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Today several thousand members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club attended the regular meetings and in addition to the club activties, many of them competed in games and contests for valuable prizes. In addition to this the vaudeville shows directed by Josh Dreno, entertained at the Arsenal, Plaza, Etna-Harris, Enright, Camerphone, Belmar, Schenley, Rowland, Manor and South Hills.

The new units, which made their first appearance at the meetings today are: The Texas Rangers, four boys, who sing old-time cowboy songs. These young men are also accomplished musicians, playing guitars, banjo and violin.

Acting as master of ceremonies for this unit was Tedye Rhea, who made the announcements and introduced the other acts via the cartoon route. This was something different from the usual art of master of ceremoning and proved a great hit with the youngsters.

CLEVER DANCERS

Also appearing with this unit was the Colbert Sisters, clever acrobatic dancers, who executed many difficult steps.

The second unit had as its headliner "Pal," a Belgium police dog, that did just about everything but talk. As the members entered the theaters where "Pal" appeared, the girls were greeted by a bow and the boys with a bark and handshake. After the members had taken their respective places, Mr. Wood, the owner of the dog, asked one little chap to come to the stage. Taking this youngster's cap, Mr. Wood then told the boy to mingle with the other boys and girls in the audience, and, after waiting two or three minutes, gave the cap to "Pal" and told him to return it to the owner, "Pal" left the stage and mingled with the audience for a couple of seconds and then laid the cap at the feet of its owner. This remarkable feat brought cheers from the youngsters. Next a little girl's scarf was used and in a short time "Pal" had returned it.

Kay Burke, the little girl with the big, blue voice, sang several songs and on her last two numbers had the audience singing right along with her.

MUSIC IN FEET

The master of ceremonies for this unit was Rocco Plaza, who, besides being the M. C., is the boy who dances music right out of his feet. He danced and danced and the members could not get enough of his dancing, at each of the theaters where he appeared he stopped the show.

The third unit consisted of the one-act comedy titled "The Irish School Master." This comedy, with six persons in the cast, showed the youngsters how the children behave in school in Ireland. Needless to say that it brought many, many laughs.

At the South Hills the youngsters were entertained by Prof. Maier's "Punch and Judy" show, which has been reviewed twice in these columns.

The Arsenal chapter held its monthly election of officers and the membership drive which has been running for the past four weeks, closed at the Cameraphone. The names of the officers elected at the Arsenal will appear here next week, together with the winners in the membership drive.

The Bug Is Contract Shark

The indoor contract bridge season is now in its fourth month. The boys expect to be out by spring.

Culbertson seems far ahead of his rivals owing to his dexterity in changing the rules without notice.

Lenz achieved the impossible yesterday at breakfast by shuffling three pieces of toast until he dealt himself a perfect hand.

Work has been rather quiet. He is experimenting with a trick deck of cards which will withhold no valuable information from his partner.

The writer ain't doing bad, either. He played with an expert the other night until exhausted. The expert finally reached that stage in telephatic sarcasm where he could cut the cards with a queer look. That's something.

We're getting much better because we pick our partners with more care. In a couple of weeks we expect to be oats for the four hossmen.

We still claim that none of the new plays tops our leaping finesse invented on a Pullman car while going around a curve.

The leaping finesse means playing out of the wrong hand while looking at all the others. Nobody is really honest at contract bridge until he gets a crick in the neck that prevents him from copping a sneak sideways.

We like the company of expert contract players. They're so jolly. Ready to laugh at a year's notice.

Contract is far more fun than whist, euchre and backgammon. It featheredges your intellect, calls for quick thinking and snap judgment. It is so absorbing that it can even make you forget that you have rye bread and sardines in the ice-box.

We hope that we don't get so good that we will write a book and have people discover how punk we are. That's how all the other champs stubbed their cardboard toes.

We're just going to keep quiet about our good game and knock off the suckers as we meet them. So watch out for us on steamboats and trains for we will be that stranger we warned you against so often.

REAL REASON

Perhaps you've wondered why so many people
Don't mind their business better than they do;
And why they dearly love to poke their noses
Deep in affairs they have no business to.

But if you made a few investigations,
Two reasons you will usually find:
The first is that they haven't any business,
The second, that they have so little mind.

'Buy Empire' Challenges U. S. Trade—'Buy American' Our Defense

THE SWEEP and intensity of the movement in Great Britain to confine purchases to British products, have already been revealed in these columns!

"BUY BRITISH" has become a principle of British life. It has been made a test of loyalty. All classes of the people, in their several spheres of living, have accepted it with fervor and unanimity as a national principle.

The other day an incident occurred in the House of Commons restaurant. It seems too small to notice. And yet its very triviality reveals the extremes to which England is proceeding in its drive to exclude all foreign articles.

A bottle of tabasco sauce was found in the restaurant of the House of Commons!

Its discovery created a commotion. Here was an American product! It could NOT be used. It could NOT BE TOLERATED. It MUST BE REMOVED, and accordingly it was CAST OUT!

One trembles to think what is in store for pickles, condiments and food stuffs from Great Britain, when the American people decide to use the means of retaliation, which they have in their hands.

THE incident shows, however, that when the English people do anything, they do it thoroughly and make a success of it. Already Great Britain has begun to feel the revival of her industry and commerce.

But she does not stop with a domestic crusade to "Buy British,"—effective and beneficial to trade as it is proving. The appeal to support British industry, and thus supply employment for British workmen, is not confined to the people living in the British Isles.

SEE THE POSTER which we reproduce ON THIS PAGE, —"Buy Empire produce—from home and overseas."

Thus the movement to "Buy British" grows in scope, embracing the dominions of Great Britain as well as the homeland.

Under the agreements reached between Great Britain and her dominions at the imperial economic conference in Ottawa last summer, a vast home market has been created, co-extensive with the British empire, the aim of which is to exclude the non-British world, and all foreign products, natural and manufactured, from British markets.

PRIME Minister Bennett, of Canada, said at the imperial conference in London in 1930:

"I offer to the mother country and to all other parts of the empire, a preference in the Canadian market in exchange for a like preference in theirs."

The empire as a whole was not then ready to adopt the plan. But in the two years that followed, the United Kingdom adopted the principle of tariffs as an instrument of economic advancement, and in August of last year announced itself ready for "a closer empire economic association."

England was prepared, according to Prime Minister Mac-

HOW BRITAIN BOOSTS HER OWN TRADE
One of the effective posters which have appeared widely in Great Britain as a part of the huge campaign to stimulate the purchase of Empire goods in preference to foreign products.

Donald, "to extend the principle of her present tariff preferences to natural products and to make the necessary adjustments in tariffs to secure the advantages which we believe will come from this arrangement."

The formula upon which the Ottawa conference proceeded was a very simple one, viz.—to lower tariff barriers among the component parts of the British empire and to raise them against all other nations.

ACCORDINGLY the British and Dominion governments at Ottawa undertook:

1—To continue free entry for all imperial products now admitted free of British duties.

2—To impose fresh duties on imports from foreign countries.

3—To apply "quantitative regulation" to certain meat imports,—i. e., the prohibitive principle of the quota.

4—To deal with imports of goods whose price is affected by foreign state action, by prohibiting the entry of such commodities for such time as may be necessary to make the empire preferences effective.

It is too early to calculate—except very generally—the effect of this revolution in the fiscal policy of the empire. Its trend, however, can be seen in the fact that only twenty-five per cent of Great Britain's foreign imports will be duty-free under the operation of the Ottawa agreements, while in 1930, eight-three per cent were admitted free of duty.

THE OTTAWA AGREEMENTS ARE FRANKLY AIMED AT THE UNITED STATES. They have been in effect only a few months, but it is estimated that they have already injured our foreign trade to the extent of $200,000,000.

"BUY EMPIRE PRODUCE FROM HOME AND OVERSEAS" is only a natural and logical enlargement of the "Buy British" movement. It seeks the protection not only of the English home market and the home workmen of England, but of British markets and workmen throughout the British dominions, —the protection not only of the British workshops, but of British farms throughout the broad reaches of the empire.

WILL THE UNITED STATES HESITATE TO GIRD ITS LOINS AGAINST THIS FORMIDABLE CHALLENGE?

Shall we continue to ADMIT BRITISH GOODS to the AMERICAN HOME MARKET when AMERICAN GOODS are MARKED FOR EXCLUSION not only by the UNITED KINGDOM but by the great countries of CANADA, AUSTRALIA, NEW ZEALAND, SOUTH AFRICA and EVERY PORTION of the EARTH where FLIES THE BRITISH FLAG?

"BUY AMERICAN" is one way of MEETING THIS CHALLENGE,—perhaps the PROMPTEST AND MOST IMMEDIATE.

It has already caused our British friends to question the wisdom of so broadly organized an attack upon America's trade.

When Congress supplements the VOLUNTARY PATRIOTISM OF OUR PEOPLE, shown in the "BUY AMERICAN" movement, by legislation which will afford adequate protection to the AMERICAN HOME MARKET, the imperial economic conference and the Ottawa agreements may not look so good,—even to British eyes.

School Directors' Duty

The Educational Program Must Not Be Curtailed—Brief Comment on Local News Items.

The Pennsylvania School Directors' Association will hold its annual meeting in Harrisburg next Wednesday and Thursday. Public school economies and taxation problems are to be the chief subjects of discussion. School expenses should be cut only if it can be done without curtailment of the educational program. It is the directors' duty to see that Pennsylvania children continue to receive the best possible education.

Economies can be effected otherwise than at the expense of the boys and girls. The Department of Public Instruction asserts that placing all school districts with less than 10,000 population under county school boards would result in immediate savings of not less than $3,150,000 a year out of $72,000,000 total expenditures of the districts in question, or 4.4 per cent.

Here in Allegheny County we have, outside of Pittsburgh, 104 school districts, each with its own board of education, Tax Collector, Solicitor and Auditor. The largest district has 3,039 pupils enrolled, the smallest has only 37. It costs $186,939 a year to collect the school taxes of the 104 districts. Pittsburgh collects a larger amount of school taxes than the total for the 104 districts, but pays only $37,306, or one fifth as much, for the collection. That gives an idea of the economies that consolidation would permit.

Pennsylvania presents, in the anthracite situation, a striking illustration of the importance of the "Buy American" movement. The Department of Labor and Industry reports there were 1,113,996 unemployed persons in the state last month. At least 50,000 of these are anthracite miners, and one reason why they are idle is because hard coal is being imported into this country in large quantities from Europe.

Notwithstanding the tax of $2 a ton placed on foreign coal at the last session of Congress, it is stated that because of the depreciation of the pound British coal can be laid down in Boston for $1.39 less than Pennsylvania anthracite. Not only the operators and miners but also the railroads serving Pennsylvania are suffering in consequence.

Public interest is certain to be keen in the com- petition for the design of a house model to be held under the direction of the Pittsburgh Chapter, American Institute of Architects, and the Pittsburgh Architectural Club, and sponsored by Kaufmann's Department Store. The contest is bound to result in new ideas for construction and will be stimulating to young architects and draftsmen.

The Point and the Golden Triangle have been photographed countless times, but a rather unusual slant was obtained by a Sun-Telegraph photographer in a picture of this famous spot which will be reproduced tomorrow in the Gravure Section. Another notable picture that will be found in the section is of the interior of the First Baptist Church, one of the city's finest examples of Gothic architecture.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Been sick?
That's tough.
Sick a long time?
Fierce luck.
And now you don't care whether school keeps or not?
Just wish they'd go away and let you die, huh?
Well, I can't blame you. I've felt like that myself.
And it sure gets your goat when they keep telling you to brace up, doesn't it?
Brace up—for what?
Just to go out again, into the same old grind?
What did that grind ever get you, anyway?
What chance has any common person in a helluva world like this?
Everything cockeyed. Everyone haywire.
What's the use of struggling?
Nothing's worth while.
So you wish everyone would shove off and let you do a fade-out.
Is that what you're thinking? Bet it is. And you've plenty of cause. Yet, Stranger, you're wrong. You're wrong in thinking life isn't worth the struggle. You're wrong in saying that nothing's worth while.
Granted that this is a helluva world. Granted, too, that everything's cockeyed, everyone's haywire—and that a common chap doesn't get a decent chance. That's all true; and the fact that it is also perfectly natural doesn't make it any easier to take. For, considering how we started, and that we're still only a couple of jumps away from the original jungle, it isn't very surprising that we're such a mess. Indeed, it's rather remarkable that we're as good as we are.
However, I'm not trying to kiss off the cussedness of our well-known race. Bawl 'em out all you want, partner—and I'm with you. But I still insist that you're wrong when you say that "nothing's worth while."
There IS "something worth while" in this world for you.
There is something 'hat's worth all the battle you can put up; all the faith, and pride, and loyalty you can give. And that something is—
YOURSELF!
Even if everything else is as much of a wash-out as you think it is—
YOU, YOURSELF, ARE WORTH THE BATTLE.
Sick and tired, weak and discouraged now? Sure you are, old kid. But think what you were once! Think what a mess you were in the past! Think of how dumb you were; how dizzy; what a fool you've made of yourself; how often you were willing to sell out! And yet—
YOU CLIMBED OUT OF ALL THAT AND MADE GOOD—MADE GOOD IN THE FACE OF A MILLION ODDS; CUSSEDNESS WITHOUT, COWARDICE WITHIN—YOU LICKED 'EM BOTH!
AND NOW YOU'RE TAKING THE COUNT BECAUSE YOU'VE HAD A SICK SPELL? BECAUSE TIMES HAVE BEEN TOUGH?
Gwan! Stop your kidding! Be your age!
Ready to die: Why, you've hardly started to live!
What would you do to anyone else who told you you were a quitter? Plenty! Yet you're all for putting that yellow bee on yourself!
Snap out of it! You've the swellest reason on earth to make good—a reason that has never failed you when you've given it a chance. Then give it that chance now. Get up and get going for—
YOURSELF!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Purely personal piffle: The prettiest words have the letter "I." Save, of course, Hendrik Van Loon's favorite, "cuspidor." The only woman who seems more beautiful to me after reducing is Fannie Hurst. I've never seen a six-day bicycle race or heard a symphony concert.

For years, I ate only the dark meat of a fowl. Now, only white. I prefer canned vegetables to fresh. No thrill-like prowling in a strange city at daybreak. Jock Whitney strikes me as least colorful of the young sportsmen, and George Raft, as having the deadest pan of movie idols.

By uncanny telepathy, I know, before opening, if a letter is unpleasant. And I'm a dud at those effortless bits of bright talk at teas. The crook that fascinated me most was Ivar Kreuger. Nor has anyone amused me like those Katzenjammer kids of playwrighting—Ben Hecht and Gene Fowler.

An early ambition was to be a hotel clerk who could rack keys in boxes by pitches that never missed. Two New York women—Grace Tibbett and Madelaine Gaxton—always look different every time I see them. There's always a tingle to movie or stage scenes of a speeding train.

I've never seen a rude Chinese. My idea of heaven used to be a cave of warm ginger snaps and pools of cool milk. My grandmother could predict weather by cobwebs. And also used them to stanch blood from a cut. I feel worldly talking to one of the big shot gamblers.

The best American plan meal I ever ate was at Coronado Beach, Cal. And one of my most embarrassing moments was in a Cincinnati boarding house when my wife hid a group of friends to eavesdrop on my baby talk to the canary when I came home from work. I rub ice cream with a spoon until it melts.

They have to pull me away from a cage of cub bears, and I'm awed by men with three initials or those who part names with hyphens. I get mad every time I write Miss Cornell's name Katherine, which is the way she spells it. I used to know a bartender named St. John Crichton. And was he a card! The most glamorous managing editor was James Keely, of Chicago.

Fancy suspenders always suggest a poolroom. For many years I visited the Central Park Zoo to see the animals and hobnob with the keeper, Billy Snyder. And, as a hotel publicity stunt, I fostered a dinner to him when he retired, and, to everybody's surprise, the town turned out in full dress.

Twice a day regularly, my deaf dog comes to my desk chair, scratches my ankle, jumps upon my lap to receive a special kind of ear rub, then gravely goes to a corner to nap. A clock could be set by his visits. Many gags pinned on Dorothy Parker are by others. Harry Acton has more fun on his job than any reporter I know. I once got out of a raid by shaking my head and repeating "No spik Inglese." The three newspapers I longed to work on during cub days were—the Kansas City Star, Baltimore Sun and Chicago Tribune.

I have more fun in Havre, which most people avoid, than any other city in Europe. The only spot remindful of Paris is Mexico City. The best directed play of the season was "Firebird." A hot bath gives me the appetite of a whale. And nothing makes me feel youngish like a march number by chorus girls. Mucilage on envelopes produces faint nausea, and feeling a soft sponge puts my teeth on edge. The cook's night out, I usually eat at Lindy's or Dinty Moore's.

Vassar graduates are the most democratic of all produced by glossy finishing schools. I've always wanted to live several weeks in one of those theatrical hotels on West Forty-seventh street. I received 8,764 Christmas cards and 421 telegrams and cables. And did I feel stuck up! The most amusing word in the language is tetter.

Free Shaves For Solons

Farmers Start Something

A statement of expenses, supplied to Senators only, not accessible to the public, which pays for the expenses, is made public, revealing interesting facts.

For instance "we the people of the United State the Senators, free, with $6,350 worth of mineral $2,500 worth of ice to go in the water. That see good deal of ice. In a night club that would be calle up," the customer being expected to supply his own whisky.

To supply Senators with "shaves and haircuts," which is done free, costs the taxpayers $8,400. The barbers are on the government payroll as "skilled laborers." The total annual cost of the 96 men in the Senate is $3,988,228 a year. It would be cheap if Senators got something done.

There is talk of a "farmers' relief bill" supplying fifteen hundred million dollars to relieve farmers loaded down with mortgages.

That might turn out to be a bill for the relief of mortgage owners, and it would relieve them considerably if the government would supply money to pay off farm mortgages, now that farmers gather in crowds and bid in for forty or fifty dollars, farms that are mortgaged for five thousand dollars or more.

Farmers have certainly started a revolution against mortgage holders. Whether it will grow into a more serious revolution, time will tell. In Wood County, Ohio, a mortgage holder foreclosed on the farm of Wallace Kramp, a mortgage for $800. Farmers gathered around, bid in the property for $14, would let nobody else bid, and gave the farm back free and clear to Mr. Kramp.

Henry W. Taft, able lawyer, brother of the late President and Chief Justice Taft, thinks Governors of states should appoint Judges. That would do away with "deals" among political bosses.

It might, but what about deals among Governors and corporations? If one or more corporations happen to own the Governor, they would appoint and own all the Judges. The street car system in New York once owned a perfectly tame Judge who gave them what they wanted when he could. But it never owned them all. The people ARE rather stupid about their voting for Judges and other things, but must learn to vote.

Putting all your judicial eggs in one gubernatorial basket would make it too easy to steal the basket and all the eggs.

Among the bad news it is pleasing to read that the War Department has placed orders for 174 fighting airships to cost $4,000,000. One hundred and eleven of them will be swift pursuit planes, 38 heavy bombardment planes, all built by private companies, which promotes competition in airplane building. We may need those planes and five thousand more one of these days.

Please note that 174 fighting airships cost $4,000,000, which is less than 10 per cent of the cost of one single battleship. And one bomb, rightly placed, from one of those 174 planes might easily end a $50,000,000 battleship's career.

Neville Chamberlain, speaking for England, wants it understood that England will pay no more than she gets from those that owe her, demand a "final settlement" and thinks that England should have been "spared the dilemma in which we were placed last December, when we had to choose between default upon our obligations and payment."

Many ordinary Americans are in the same position. They have to pay or default. And a good many of them will default when additional taxes are piled on their backs to make up for defaulting and welching by European nations.

Farmers in the Argentine attack problems on the "I'm not asking you, I'm telling you" basis. Lower farm rents, a four-year moratorium on all debts, maximum interest of 4 per cent, are in their program. They add, "We shall let our farms remain idle until you do what we ask," and they mean it.
